Not Jauan Jennings drafted like someone who arrived at the board with a list of players they simply had to own, consequences be damned, and the results are about as charitable as the name implies. The clearest evidence is Juwan Johnson at TE20, a player the market had pegged as a round-eleven pick who got yanked off the board in round six, a 4.8-round reach that would be the most damning line on any draft sheet in the field. It is not even the only one. Wan'Dale Robinson, projected WR47, cost a pick in round eight when the rest of the tournament was not touching him until round ten. Against that backdrop, the Dak Prescott and CeeDee Lamb stack offers the one credible argument that the manager knows something, but Prescott himself was a 1.3-round reach at QB7, which means even the good news comes with an asterisk that is not the flattering kind. This team finished in the 30th percentile of scoring last season and nothing in this draft suggests the trajectory has changed.

Parker in the back sits 11th in the Half Life division and in the ninth percentile of the entire field, and the draft sheet explains exactly how they got there. The roster features zero steals, zero values, and three major reaches, which is the kind of trifecta that gets a draft class studied in the wrong kind of film session. Bhayshul Tuten, a RB25, was yanked 2.4 rounds ahead of his ADP while the running back group cratered anyway, leaving Tuten as the clear headliner of a backfield that projects weak across the board. Meanwhile, Brenton Strange, a TE17, cost a seventh-round pick when his ADP sat squarely in the tenth, which is a lot of conviction to spend on a guy projecting outside the top 15. The one area that actually coheres, a strong group anchored by Trey McBride at TE2 and Colston Loveland at TE3, exists largely because the manager drafted it that way on purpose, which makes the chaos everywhere else harder to excuse. Daniel Jones, projected QB25, is reportedly healthy after a 2025 Achilles rupture, and somehow he is the optimistic part of this outlook.

TE: Jake Ferguson (S) (TE12 | $8 | 7.08), Theo Johnson (TE37 | $0 | 14.05)

Jess505 sits 10th in the Half Life division and in the bottom fifth of the entire field, and the draft record explains exactly how that happened. Four major reaches dot this roster, and the damage is real: Kyle Monangai (RB33) was taken nearly two and a half rounds early, Theo Johnson (TE37) came off the board almost four rounds ahead of schedule, and Tyler Allgeier (RB46) cost a pick three full rounds above his market price. That is not aggressive drafting, that is paying retail for clearance merchandise. The backfield is legitimately strong, with Jonathan Taylor (RB4), Saquon Barkley (RB8), and Travis Etienne (RB18) projecting as starters, and Caleb Williams (QB6) anchors a functional stack with Luther Burden (WR22). But the receiver group grades out weak, and those early investments in Monangai and Allgeier are now occupying roster spots that better-valued players could have filled. There is no obvious recourse from here. The ceiling is real but narrow, and the floor is uncomfortably close.

Ace978 enters 2026 sitting ninth in the Half Life division and at just the 32nd percentile of the field, and the roster construction does not offer much reason for optimism. The most damning issue is at quarterback, where Jordan Love checks in at QB17 and Kirk Cousins sits all the way down at QB35, a pairing that functions as a ceiling more than a floor. Brock Bowers at TE1 is a genuine asset, and Ashton Jeanty projects as a legitimate difference-maker at RB7, but the draft board tells a cautionary tale: two major reaches, including Breece Hall taken nearly two rounds ahead of his ADP and Rachaad White taken over two full rounds early, suggest the roster was built on optimism that the rankings are not currently validating. Jeanty and Bowers can carry a lineup on their best days, but in a positionless format, the overall depth of quality matters enormously, and Love's ceiling as the projected starter at QB17 means Ace978 is likely bringing a butter knife to a sword fight most weeks.

TE: Cade Otton (TE27 | $2 | 12.04), David Njoku (TE29 | $1 | 15.09)

DiNasty7 played the draft almost exactly right, and the roster still landed at 8th in the Half Life division and the 41st percentile of the field, which is the kind of outcome that makes a manager question everything they thought they knew about fantasy football. The value-hunting was real: Tee Higgins fell 1.6 rounds before this team pounced at 6.04, George Pickens slipped nearly a full round and landed at WR10, and Baker Mayfield dropped a staggering 2.1 rounds before anyone else noticed. The problem is not the process, it is the ceiling. Christian McCaffrey anchors the roster as RB3 and Pickens and Garrett Wilson project as legitimate starters, but the back end fades quickly, and Jaylen Warren is the projected weakest starter at RB27. Chase Brown, taken 1.3 rounds ahead of his ADP, is the single biggest gamble on the board, and if he disappoints, the careful value work elsewhere barely matters. Getting the prices right is supposed to be the advantage. DiNasty7 got the prices right and still has very little margin for error.

TE: Gunnar Helm (TE26 | $2 | 14.11), Michael Mayer (TE39 | $0 | 20.11)

DeathByTouchdown sits 7th in the Half Life division and at the 42nd percentile of the field, which means there is no comfortable margin for error and no obvious reason to expect things to improve. The receiver group grades out weak, with Xavier Worthy projected as the WR49 and the team's weakest projected starter, and the depth behind him offers little reassurance. The draft did not help matters the way it needed to. Four major reaches dot the board, most glaringly TreVeyon Henderson taken 2.2 rounds ahead of his ADP and Tony Pollard grabbed 2.2 rounds early as well, meaning capital was spent acquiring players at prices that left little room for upside. There is genuine talent here, Josh Allen and Drake Maye form a strong quarterback pairing, and the Maye situation looks quietly interesting with AJ Brown now in New England to give him the alpha target he lacked before. But Allen and Maye being strong does not paper over a receiver group that grades weak, and a roster that reaches more than it steals is one that has already spent tomorrow's luck today.

Outsider52 is the kind of team that wins eleven games or eight and you couldn't have told you which before the season started. The ceiling is real: Justin Jefferson at WR6 and Amon-Ra St. Brown at WR4 give this roster a legitimate top end, and landing Patrick Mahomes at QB12 a full two rounds after his ADP is the sort of quiet draft coup that separates competent managers from lucky ones. But the margins here are thin and unforgiving. Jaylen Waddle, reached a round and a half early at WR23, needs to outperform his cost every single week for that pick to break even, and the projected starters beyond the top tier, particularly RJ Harvey at RB28, leave almost no cushion. Sixth in the Half Life division and sitting at the 45th percentile, Outsider52 is not a team anyone fears in week one, but it is absolutely a team that could make someone's season miserable in week twelve if the variables break right. The margins decide this one. They always do.

Brian6382 didn't make a lot of noise at the draft table, and that's exactly the point. The foundation here is a backfield that could carry a contender all on its own: Bijan Robinson at RB2 leads the charge, and Kenneth Walker III, snagged a full round and change after his ADP, slots in as a projected RB10. That's not luck, that's board management. Joe Burrow and Jayden Daniels give the team two projected starters at QB4 and QB5, meaning Brian isn't sweating a bad week from one signal-caller. The receiver group is admittedly thin on projected starters, but in a positionless format, the backfield depth more than compensates. The two major reaches, Brian Robinson and Mason Taylor, are the one blemish worth noting, but they're late-round bets that don't threaten the core. Sitting 54th percentile and fifth in the Half Life division, this roster isn't a finished product yet, but the bones are good and the draft was quietly efficient in all the ways that tend to matter in October.

BrewtownNM didn't build this roster on one splashy moment. They built it pick by pick, and the cumulative effect is a team that lands comfortably in the 59th percentile of the field with a clear path to climbing. The foundation is genuinely elite: Jahmyr Gibbs at RB1 and De'Von Achane at RB6 give this team a top tier that most managers would envy, and Tyler Warren (TE4), Tucker Kraft (TE5), and Sam LaPorta (TE8) form a tight end group that is almost unfairly good at the top. What makes the draft grade stand out is the consistency underneath those stars. Cam Skattebo fell nearly a round and a half past his ADP before BrewtownNM grabbed him at RB20, and Chigoziem Okonkwo slid 1.7 rounds before landing at TE19. Neither pick changed the mood in the room, but both quietly made a good roster better. Dalton Kincaid's knee situation adds a note of caution, but even as a contingency piece behind Warren, Kraft, and LaPorta, the downside is manageable. This is what a clean, disciplined draft looks like.

AprilBalasq enters 2026 sitting third in the Half Life division and in the top 10 percent of the entire field, and the draft record tells you exactly why: mostly chalk, but the deviations almost all broke the right way. Jaxson Dart landing at pick 8.12 when his ADP sat at 5.06 is the kind of slip that makes a draft, and pairing him with Isaiah Likely, another late-faller taken two rounds past his number, means AprilBalasq gets a live QB-TE stack at a discount. The receiving group does the heavy lifting at the top, with Ja'Marr Chase projecting as WR2 and Nico Collins right behind him at WR9, both projected starters anchoring a group that doesn't need much help from the rest of the roster. The one blemish is Darnell Mooney, reached nearly four rounds early, but one overreach buried in round 14 barely registers when the rest of the board went this cleanly. This is not a team built on one bold swing. It is a team built on consistently winning the small moments, and that tends to hold up.

Willrael did not stumble into a 91st percentile roster. This is a draft built with intention, and the receiver corps is where that intention announces itself loudest. Jaxon Smith-Njigba at WR3, Drake London at WR7, Rashee Rice at WR13, and DeVonta Smith at WR14 form a top line that most managers would mortgage the middle rounds to assemble, and willrael still had enough runway to land Zay Flowers at WR16 and Ladd McConkey at WR20, both of them genuine values taken well past their ADPs. That patience is the real story here. When the board pushed players past their expected range, willrael was positioned to catch them, not scramble. The worst projected starter in this lineup is Josh Downs at WR46, which in most leagues would be a perfectly acceptable third option. A 2025 record of 6-30 is the caveat attached to all of this optimism, but the construction this time is cleaner, the value acquisition more precise, and the foundation considerably harder to argue with.

DameOverboard finished 2025 in the 21st percentile and came back in 2026 looking like a completely different operation. The draft tells the story: no reaches, not a single one, and steals scattered across the board that would make a seasoned SFB drafter nod in quiet respect. Harold Fannin, projected TE6, fell a full two rounds past his ADP and landed at pick 7.04. Bo Nix, projected QB15, slipped more than three rounds and cost essentially nothing relative to his value. These are not accidents, they are the product of someone who knew their board and held their nerve when the room got weird. Meanwhile the projected starters read like a who's who of the position: Puka Nacua at WR1, A.J. Brown at WR8, Lamar Jackson at QB3, Chris Olave at WR11, Malik Nabers at WR12. That is a lineup that can beat you five different ways. First in the Half Life division, 100th percentile in the field. DameOverboard did not just bounce back from 2025, they built something worth studying.
