Welcome to the 2025 fantasy football season, where Sara Thornburg (@) is poised to redefine mediocrity in both spectacular fashion and abject defeat. With a snug grip on the bottom rung of CapitalCityCapitals and an overall standing that reeks of subterranean ineptitude, this team's roster is a veritable masterclass in drafting missteps. At tight end, Mike Gesicki somehow manages to be less effective than a broken clock, while Javonte Williams valiantly attempts to fill the gaping chasm of relevance as the team's weakest starter. The wide receiver corps, ranking a surprising fourth in the division, is a case study in quantity over quality, with Malik Nabers shining like a lone beacon in a sea of unfulfilled potential. Of course, it wouldn't be a complete disaster without some notable draft "strategy." After shattering expectations by reaching for Baker Mayfield and Raheem Mostert long before common sense would dictate, the team also decided that Malik Nabers was worth grabbing at the first opportunity, leaving other more sensible choices for their competitors. As Sara Thornburg (@) embarks on what promises to be a truly memorable season—for all the wrong reasons —one can't help but wonder if they are simply committed to excellence in finding new ways to lose.

As the 2025 fantasy football season looms for Mike Braude (@braudem), the team finds itself in a precarious position, teetering toward the bottom of their division rankings. After a subpar 2024 campaign that saw them struggle with consistency, the team's prospects this year are clouded by a familiar set of challenges. Their running back corps remains a glaring weakness, with Cam Skattebo and Tyjae Spears bringing little assurance of stability. Nonetheless, Mike Braude boasts the premier tight end lineup in their division—anchored by Brock Bowers, T.J. Hockenson, and Dallas Goedert— even if Goedert, projected as a starter, raises questions with his current form. The wide receiver group, while mid-pack in divisional strength, offers a mix of dependable production and potential explosiveness, spearheaded by Ladd McConkey and Tyreek Hill. The team achieved commendable value in acquiring Jalen Hurts below his average draft position, which could provide a vital boost in pivotal matchups. However, the tendency to reach for players like Jarquez Hunter may have inadvertently curtailed overall roster value. As the curtain rises on the new season, the team sits at a low percentile in tournament standings, with aspirations of climbing out of mediocrity hinging on both tactical adjustments and a touch of fortune.

As the 2025 fantasy football season kicks off, the team Hasan Rahim (@hrr5010) is ready to break the shackles of mediocrity and transform into a powerhouse of whimsical proportions! Last year, they ended up just slightly above average, but this year they're spicing things up with the dynamic duo of Trey McBride and Kyler Murray ready to sprinkle some magic on the field. With tight ends that could practically tie knots around their opponents, Colston Loveland and Brenton Strange round out a TE lineup that's tighter than a pair of skinny jeans on Thanksgiving. While Bhayshul Tuten might not win any speed skating contests, he's set to plod his way through defenses with enthusiasm, if not speed. The team's wide receiver group is a colorful cast, led by Brian Thomas Jr., who's fully prepared to soar like an eagle, albeit one with questionable navigation skills, while DK Metcalf and Tetairoa McMillan provide solid support. Though they rank 10th in their division, Hasan Rahim's youthful squad boasts an average age of only 24.3, which means they have the energy for celebrations as flamboyant as their plays. And let's not forget their smart drafting with Cedric Tillman and Colston Loveland, snagged at bargain prices that even a savvy shopper would envy. So, here's to hoping for a fantastically silly ride this season, where laughter and touchdowns are both aplenty!

As the 2025 fantasy football season kicks off, Patrick Daugherty (@RotoPat) looks to build on last year's strong finish, where they landed in the 62nd percentile overall. The team enters the new season ranked 9th in their division and in the 41st percentile, eager to climb the ranks with a blend of proven talent and strategic gambles. Quarterback Josh Allen, ranked second in his position, is set to lead the charge alongside Dak Prescott, providing a solid foundation under center. Wide receivers Amon-Ra St. Brown and Garrett Wilson bolster the lineup, with supporting performances from Zay Flowers and Michael Pittman contributing to their respectable fifth-place WR rank in the division. However, tight end Isaiah Likely, positioned as TE18, stands as a potential vulnerability that could influence the team's overall success. On the draft front, securing Tyler Shough later than projected could be a savvy move, while an early pick on Keon Coleman reflects calculated risk-taking. As they navigate both the weekly matchups and the broader competitive field, Patrick Daugherty's squad hopes these strategic decisions will pay dividends throughout the season.

The 2025 season is shaping up to be a rollercoaster for Tristan H. Cockcroft (@SultanofStat) as they embark on their quest for gridiron glory. Nestled comfortably in the middle of the CapitalCityCapitals division, ranked 7th, the team is looking to claw their way higher while sitting in the 45th percentile overall. With Dalton Kincaid TE13 serving as both a crucial starter and a potential Achilles' heel, all eyes will be on him to see if he can defy expectations and become a key asset. The wide receiver squad, with Rashee Rice WR15, Mike Evans WR21, DeVonta Smith WR25, and Calvin Ridley WR36, offers a tantalizing blend of solid performance and sleeper potential, especially since Ridley was nabbed at a value price. Meanwhile, the decision to draft Ashton Jeanty earlier than anticipated could either prove to be a masterstroke or a head-scratcher, depending on his performance. Elsewhere, the Patrick Mahomes/Rashee Rice stack promises fireworks aplenty, making opponents nervously adjust their defensive strategies. As the season unfolds, this team will aim to rise through the ranks like an underdog story for the ages.

Get ready to enter the enchanting realm of fantasy football where team Luke Christian (@lukechr37903112) is gearing up for a season filled with whimsical gridiron battles. With an 8th-place perch in the CapitalCityCapitals division and lounging comfortably in the 45th percentile overall, this team is set to charm even the sternest of critics. The wide receiver lineup is nothing short of a fairy tale, led by none other than the princely Ja'Marr Chase WR1 alongside the dynamic duo of Travis Hunter WR12 and Davante Adams WR20. Meanwhile, quarterbacks Justin Herbert QB13 and Bryce Young QB22 put forth their best efforts with plenty of room for magic. Rhamondre Stevenson RB40 is the unlikely hero in this tale—his performance could either unlock the treasure trove or see the team face a dragon or two. Despite these uncertainties, Alvin Kamara RB14 and Chuba Hubbard RB18 are on standby to lend a helping hand. The team's secret weapon lies in the draft steals of Jonnu Smith and Zach Ertz, whose late-round arrivals may prove to be the hidden talismans of this adventure. On the flip side, early snatches of Travis Hunter and Adam Thielen add a dash of unpredictability to the squad's strategic potion. With twists and turns aplenty, Luke Christian (@lukechr37903112) is poised to weave a story that could captivate the fantasy realm, leaving fans eager to see how this eclectic ensemble will fare on their quest for glory.

As the 2025 fantasy football season kicks off, Ryan Finley (@RyanCFinley) is poised to build on their successful 2024 campaign. With a finish in the 62nd percentile last year, they are aiming to climb the ranks even further this season. Armed with arguably the strongest quarterback lineup in their division, including Lamar Jackson (QB1), Joe Burrow (QB5), and Matthew Stafford (QB25), the team is set for some explosive performances. While their wide receiver core might face challenges, Terry McLaurin (WR19) and Courtland Sutton (WR26) bring experience and skill that can surprise any week. Tight end Kyle Pitts (TE17) stands as a pivotal figure, and if he exceeds expectations, the team's potential could skyrocket. Smart draft choices have given them an edge, particularly in securing great value with picks like Chris Godwin. Despite reaching a bit for some players, they possess a strategic mix of talent and depth. Positioned in the middle of their division, Ryan Finley (@RyanCFinley) has all the tools to make a splash this season and perhaps secure a spot in the top echelons of the competition.

As the 2025 season kicks off, Team Matt Price (@MattPriceFF) is poised for a promising campaign. With a solid foundation built around dynamic wide receivers like A.J. Brown, Jaxon Smith-Njigba, and the rising star Marvin Harrison Jr., their aerial attack ranks among the division's elite. The strategic drafting of Isiah Pacheco and Emeka Egbuka provides depth and potential breakout performances that could elevate the team's standing. While Matthew Golden, a key projected starter, will be crucial in determining the overall success, the optimism lies in the potential for improvement across the board. Despite some challenges from last season, including a lower scoring percentile and win rate, this team sits comfortably in the middle of the pack, ready to make significant strides forward. If Trevor Lawrence can outperform his ADP expectations and Christian McCaffrey continues to deliver at an elite level, the team has every reason to aim for success both in their division and on the broader stage.

TE: Mark Andrews (S) (TE9 | $8 | 9.04), Cade Otton (TE24 | $0 | 17.04), Terrance Ferguson (TE32 | $0 | 18.09)

As the 2025 season kicks off, Ben Person (@benperson) stands poised for an exciting journey with a lineup that boasts some of the strongest wide receivers in their division. Led by Justin Jefferson and CeeDee Lamb, complemented by the emerging Nico Collins, this team is well-equipped to light up scoreboards each week. The strategic drafting of James Cook and Mark Andrews, securing them at exceptional value, adds depth to their roster. While J.K. Dobbins faces high expectations as a crucial starter in the backfield, his performance could be a pivotal factor in their quest for success. Meanwhile, snagging Cooper Kupp later than anticipated represents a potential game-changing move. Ranking fourth in their division and sitting in the 66th percentile overall, Ben Person is set to make waves and potentially climb the ranks by leveraging their passing game and managing the running back scenario effectively. With a small stack bonus from the Justin Jefferson and J.J. McCarthy duo, they're well-positioned to surprise opponents and fans alike this season.

As the 2025 fantasy football season kicks off, Andy Goldstein (@RateMyLeague) is poised for an electrifying run. Riding high from a dominant 2024 showing, where they finished in the 85th percentile overall and boasted a 75% winning record, this youthful squad—averaging just 24.3 years per starter—is eager to keep the momentum rolling. With a solid foundation laid by their strong quarterback duo of Jayden Daniels (QB3) and Michael Penix Jr. (QB21), the team is looking fierce and ready to challenge for the top spot, despite some weaknesses at tight end. Their strategic drafting landed them great value picks with Jayden Daniels and Jaylen Waddle, while players like Trey Benson, though a weaker link, still promise excitement in the running back slot. With standout wide receivers like Drake London (WR9) leading the charge, Andy's team is more than ready to tackle the competition and rise up the ranks, showcasing their grit and determination in the CapitalCityCapitals division. Let the games begin!

The Des Bieler (@DesBieler) team is poised for a thrilling 2025 fantasy football season, riding high on the momentum of their impressive 2024 campaign. As a powerhouse in the CapitalCityCapitals division, they boast the strongest running back lineup, led by the explosive Saquon Barkley, a top contender in the RB rankings, supported by the tenacity of Chase Brown and the dynamic talents of Kenneth Walker III and Joe Mixon. With Tony Pollard and Jordan Mason adding depth to the roster, their ground game promises to be unmatched. Despite some challenges at the quarterback position, with Cam Ward, Brock Purdy, and Geno Smith each striving to emerge as the definitive leader, the team's strategic drafting has positioned them well, thanks to exceptional value picks like Daniel Jones and Darnell Mooney. Even with a reach on Will Shipley, the team has deftly crafted a lineup that complements their strengths. Although the wide receiver corps, headlined by Puka Nacua, could use some bolstering, the squad's overall chemistry and tactical acumen have catapulted them to an enviable second in the division and a remarkable 86th percentile in overall rankings, setting the stage for an unforgettable season ahead.

As the 2025 fantasy football season kicks off, COLBY SPRINGER (@KiloAlphaQuick) is poised for an electrifying run, sitting proudly at the top of the CapitalCityCapitals division and soaring into the upper echelons of competition with a stellar 91st percentile tournament ranking. The team's success is anchored by a formidable corps of running backs, led by the unparalleled Bijan Robinson, Derrick Henry's consistent power, and a slew of talent including Kaleb Johnson and D'Andre Swift that promises to dominate the field. While their wide receiver lineup may not boast the same depth, this team's tight end strategy shines brightly in the TE Premium setup, featuring powerhouse performers like George Kittle, Sam LaPorta, and Evan Engram, each capable of turning matchups in their favor. Tua Tagovailoa, snagged at a remarkable value after his ADP, stands ready to lead the offense, supported by clever draft maneuvers that also brought Derrick Henry into the fold with exceptional value. Despite a few bold reaches in the draft, the strategic acumen displayed by COLBY SPRINGER has crafted a squad with tremendous upside, promising an exciting season filled with high expectations and potential triumphs.
