Scott Fish Bowl Rankings, Analysis, and Team Breakdowns

Rankings are based on actual Scott Fish Bowl ADP from the FantasyLife Scott Fish Bowl tool. Note that in a major tournament like this with nearly 5,000 teams, there are miniscule degrees of separation at play. One player having a breakout season can drastically change a team's results.

These rankings are intended to be entertaining and add in a small way to a wonderful cause. Please consider donating to Fantasy Cares.

As the 2025 fantasy football season kicks off, Shake & Bake finds itself in a precarious position, desperately clinging to the bottom of their division. Despite a solid performance last year, finishing in the 66th percentile, this season's prospects appear bleak. The team's quarterback situation is particularly troubling, with C.J. Stroud and Tua Tagovailoa struggling to inspire confidence as they rank outside the top 15. Tua, in particular, seems an ill-advised gamble, expected to be a regular starter despite his lowly ranking. In a TE Premium setup, the team's tight ends are its only saving grace, but even their strong performances might not counterbalance the glaring weaknesses elsewhere, especially among wide receivers like Tetairoa McMillan and Keon Coleman, who rank far below expectations. The running back corps, while strong on paper, may struggle to carry the team on their own. Additionally, questionable draft decisions, such as reaching for Brian Robinson and others, have compromised the roster's overall value. With an average starter age of 24.5, this youthful lineup lacks the experience and cohesion needed to compete at a higher level, leaving Shake & Bake in the unfortunate position of being last in their division and ranked in the 4th percentile overall. Without significant improvements, this season could prove to be a disheartening one for the team and its supporters.

As we brace for another season of make-believe gridiron glory with Pa-Pa-Pa-PLAYOFFS????, the team's strategic masterminds have once again crafted an ensemble that somehow manages to be both breathtaking and bewildering. With a quarterback lineup headlined by Lamar Jackson, this squad boasts talent capable of dazzling displays of athletic prowess—or at least providing a nice distraction while their running backs attempt to navigate the treacherous waters of mediocrity. Enter Jaydon Blue, whose ranking suggests he'll need a divine intervention just to cross the line of scrimmage. Meanwhile, in the wide receiver department, where riches abound, Amon-Ra St. Brown and Garrett Wilson shine brighter than the team's odds of winning anything meaningful. The front office's curious taste for reaching far beyond sensible draft picks ensures a rollercoaster ride, with some picks like Travis Etienne seeming as if they were made after a few too many celebratory champagne toasts. Despite these creative drafting choices, this team's aspirations are on a collision course with reality, settling comfortably just above rock bottom in their local arena while barely penetrating the tournament's upper echelons. As they march into the 2025 season, we remain hopeful that Pa-Pa-Pa-PLAYOFFS???? will at least provide entertainment, if not triumph.

Welcome to the 2025 season of If U ain't 1st, Ur last, where the team's spirited commitment to mediocrity seems to be paying off in consistent fashion. Nestled comfortably just above the basement in their division at rank 10, and flaunting a tournament ranking that's a mere 15th percentile, this squad boasts a lineup that's as balanced as a unicycle on a tightrope. With quarterbacks like Cam Ward and Brock Purdy offering all the reliability of a papier-mâché umbrella in a thunderstorm, you'd think the team might struggle more. Yet somehow, they managed to snag Brock Bowers, the gem of tight ends, at an impressive 1.04. Incredible! Meanwhile, in the backfield, Jerome Ford's RB50 status is a testament to the team's philosophy of turning potential into... well, not much. On the bright side, Tyler Warren and Bowers should keep things somewhat interesting in this TE Premium setup, assuming anyone else on the roster manages to move the ball downfield. The receiver corps shows a glimmer of hope with Ladd McConkey, who slipped through the draft like a mispriced vintage wine, but let's not dwell too much on the optimistic. After all, this team has already excelled at something: turning what could have been great value into a masterclass in reaching for the stars, only to land flat on the ground.

As the 2025 fantasy football season kicks off, Skunkdrool looks to make a splash with a dynamic running back corps leading the charge. With Jahmyr Gibbs showcasing elite talent as a top RB3 and Jonathan Taylor delivering consistent performance at RB9, the team is well-positioned in the backfield. Complementing them are reliable contributors like Chuba Hubbard and D'Andre Swift, providing depth that could be crucial for navigating the grueling schedule ahead. However, the team's wide receiver lineup remains a concern, with Emeka Egbuka, Khalil Shakir, and Jakobi Meyers bringing moderate rankings that might struggle to bring in high scores. The tight ends, on the other hand, bolster Skunkdrool's potential with George Kittle and Evan Engram both poised to deliver impactful performances, especially vital in this TE Premium setup. Dallas Goedert, while a potential weak link, could still be a pivotal player if he outperforms expectations. Draft-day strategies paid off with great value picks like Zach Charbonnet and George Kittle, but time will tell if reaching for Jakobi Meyers pays dividends. Currently ranked 8th in their division, Skunkdrool aims to climb the ranks, leveraging their strengths and addressing their weaknesses to move up from the 39th percentile standing overall.

In the whimsical world of fantasy football, King Candy aka Turbo storms into the 2025 season armed with a colorful brigade of running backs that could rival Willy Wonka's factory. The team's prophetic journey seems poised on the edge of absurdity, as they tango at the enigmatic rank of 9 in their division, while frolicking in the 38th percentile across the vast landscape of competitors. Guided by the enigmatic Bijan Robinson, who stands atop the mountain as the unparalleled RB1, and supported by trusty steeds like Josh Jacobs and TreVeyon Henderson, King's stable of runners is ready to trample anything in its path, should they manage to steer clear of rogue licorice vines or errant sugar storms. Yet, lurking just beneath the surface of this candied kingdom is the curious enigma of J.K. Dobbins, whose importance to the team parallels that of a gumdrop button on a gingerbread man. His trajectory is as unpredictable as an inflatable hedgehog, oscillating between dazzling brilliance and the potential missteps of a dance-off with a wobbling weasel. Alongside, the wide receivers seem destined to orbit as minor celestial bodies around the sun-like presence of the backfield, casting shadows that may not brighten the skies but surely add to the surreal narrative. The youthful zest of this squad—averaging a mere 24.8 years—brings a certain sprightliness to King Candy's quest. They've managed to snatch Bo Nix and Russell Wilson from the draft clutches later than expected, like finding golden tickets in a sea of chocolate bars. Their reach for Jaylen Warren and J.K. Dobbins might have seemed like grabbing at shooting stars, while TreVeyon Henderson's early selection left team strategists caught somewhere between delighted anticipation and confounded puzzlement. And so, as King Candy aka Turbo embarks on their fantastical adventure, one can only expect a season filled with unexpected twists, triumphs, and a touch of the deliciously absurd.

As the DesignatedDrinkers gear up for the 2025 fantasy football season, they find themselves poised for a compelling journey. Positioned in the middle of the pack in both their division and overall rankings, there's room for strategic maneuvers to elevate their standing. The wide receiver corps, featuring A.J. Brown, Davante Adams, and George Pickens, is one of the team's strengths, though Tre Harris is a pivotal question mark with potential to impact their success. The quarterback slot boasts impressive value picks in Justin Herbert and Geno Smith, which could be a game-changer given their draft positions. Meanwhile, Ashton Jeanty and Austin Ekeler represent calculated risks, taken earlier than anticipated but holding the promise of delivering significant returns. With seasoned players like Luther Burden and Demario Douglas being drafted later than projected, this team has tactfully assembled a roster that could surprise many if the pieces fall into place. As they navigate this new season, the DesignatedDrinkers will look to advance through the ranks with smart plays and strategic matchups.

With Josh Allen leading the charge as QB2, the quarterback position is set to deliver consistent powerhouse performances. The wide receiver lineup is particularly promising, featuring standout players like Puka Nacua, ranked WR5, who is expected to have a stellar season, alongside Tee Higgins and Courtland Sutton. These weapons will surely keep the scoreboard buzzing each week. Although Jonnu Smith at TE15 might require some tactical finesse, his performance could be the linchpin for elevating the team's success. The clever drafting of Xavier Legette and strategic leap on Najee Harris and Kyle Monangai reflect a bold strategy, adding depth and potential breakout value to the roster. As shafer92 gears up for the 2025 fantasy football season, there's much to be optimistic about despite a slightly lower ranking than last year's dominant performance. After finishing in the 98th percentile in 2024, they're poised for another competitive run, particularly with their outstanding wide receiver lineup. Justin Jefferson and CeeDee Lamb lead an enviable squad that could carry the team to great heights, while Brian Thomas Jr. and the ever-reliable Tyreek Hill add considerable depth. Although running back Isaac Guerendo and tight end Isaiah Likely present challenges, the team has made strategic value picks, securing Kyler Murray and Jared Goff later than expected, which could pay dividends. Cooper Kupp's performance will be crucial, but if he steps up, shafer92 might surpass expectations. With a middle-of-the-pack division rank, there's a strong foundation here for a promising season.

As the 2025 fantasy football season dawns, groettum2 stands poised on the precipice of greatness, a formidable force in the Chip Ganassi Racing division and a contender among the elite, weaving their strategy with deft precision. Their quarterback arsenal is unparalleled, as Jayden Daniels orchestrates plays with finesse, Patrick Mahomes commands the field with his signature prowess, and Michael Penix Jr. showcases unexpected brilliance, having been procured with shrewd late-round tactics. This trio forms the backbone of a squad that ranks respectably high, yet seeks to ascend even further. The wide receiver corps is nothing short of dazzling, led by the luminary Malik Nabers, whose early selection foreshadows his explosive potential. Complemented by the versatile talents of Jaxon Smith-Njigba and Terry McLaurin, who enjoys a symbiotic connection with Daniels, this squad radiates promise. DeVonta Smith and DK Metcalf add depth and dynamism, while Chris Olave and Jerry Jeudy inject flair and unpredictability. Brandon Aiyuk and Rashod Bateman offer depth, ensuring that no corner is left unfortified. Yet amidst the brilliance, the spotlight cautiously hovers over Michael Pittman, whose performance could be the fulcrum upon which their aspirations turn. Though groettum2's tight end situation, with Kyle Pitts, remains an area of potential reinforcement, the team's strategic drafting acumen ensures they remain competitive. Securing Braelon Allen with savvy timing and snagging Penix Jr. as a late-round gem, groettum2's interplay of skill and strategy promises a season of thrilling conquests. As the journey unfolds, this team embodies both the spirit of audacity and the meticulous art of fantasy football mastery in their quest for supremacy.

As the Palous Sunday Drivers embark on their highly anticipated 2025 fantasy football season, the air is thick with expectation and ambition. Last year's modest performance has given way to a newfound determination, propelling them to a ranking of third within their fiercely competitive division, Chip Ganassi Racing, and soaring into the esteemed 84th percentile among the elite challengers. With a roster adorned by the electrifying talents of Ja'Marr Chase, the unrivaled colossus of wide receivers, and supported by a stellar cast including Nico Collins and D.J. Moore, the team's aerial assault promises to dazzle with its precision and potency. The strategic acquisition of Jalen Hurts, secured with exceptional value, affirms the team's prowess in drafting, while the steady hands of Matthew Stafford provide a seasoned backup presence. Although the running back stable, led by James Cook, faces the daunting task of elevating their division rank, the gritty determination of David Montgomery and the opportunistic Jordan Mason shine as potential game-changers. Even as the team ventured boldly with certain picks, such as the dynamic Keenan Allen, their calculated risks embody a daring pursuit of glory. As the season unfolds, the Palous Sunday Drivers stand poised to transcend past performances, marching boldly toward a future glittering with possibilities and the promise of supremacy.

Anticipation is soaring for OfficialJono's 2025 fantasy football season, as they stand poised to make an indelible mark with their exceptional blend of talent and strategy. Occupying the prestigious second spot in their division and soaring in the 89th percentile overall, this team has crafted an impressive roster that promises excitement and potential for glory. At the heart of their strength are dynamic running backs like Saquon Barkley (RB2) and De'Von Achane (RB6), who are both ready to dominate on the field. Bolstering their lineup, Tyjae Spears (RB41), though one of the less heralded starters, brings a unique versatility that could surprise opponents and prove pivotal in crucial matchups. The wide receivers, led by the electrifying Drake London (WR9) and complemented by Rashee Rice (WR15), add a layer of finesse and depth, ensuring that OfficialJono remains a formidable force. Savvy drafting has allowed them to secure incredible value with players such as Saquon Barkley and the promising Drake Maye, setting the stage for a season brimming with possibilities. Even strategic reaches like Blake Corum and Jake Ferguson are poised to reward the team's boldness with breakout performances. As the new season unfolds, OfficialJono stands ready to captivate fans and competitors alike, driven by a well-rounded squad and an unwavering pursuit of victory.

As the 2025 fantasy football season kicks off, Team scrabbleff stands poised to dominate both their division, Chip Ganassi Racing, and the broader tournament landscape. Coming off a successful 2024 campaign with a solid 62 percentile finish, they're now the team to beat, ranking first in their division and an impressive 93rd percentile overall. This powerhouse status is fueled by having the strongest running back lineup in the division, featuring elite talents like Christian McCaffrey (RB5) and Derrick Henry (RB7), along with a deep bench including Chase Brown (RB12) and Joe Mixon (RB19). Though the wide receiver and tight end positions might not be the team's strongest, strategic drafting has brought great value, such as securing Baker Mayfield and Dak Prescott well after their expected draft positions, setting up the quarterback slot for success. Even Javonte

Williams, who ranks RB35, is poised to contribute significantly despite being one of the weaker projected starters. With players like Jameson Williams and Ricky Pearsall also drafted at a value, scrabbleff's tactical acumen shines through, making them a formidable contender this season.
