Scott Fish Bowl Rankings, Analysis, and Team Breakdowns

Rankings are based on actual Scott Fish Bowl ADP from the FantasyLife Scott Fish Bowl tool. Note that in a major tournament like this with nearly 5,000 teams, there are miniscule degrees of separation at play. One player having a breakout season can drastically change a team's results.

These rankings are intended to be entertaining and add in a small way to a wonderful cause. Please consider donating to Fantasy Cares.

As the 2025 fantasy football season looms on the horizon, Bulls on Parade find themselves grappling with the shadows of their dominant 2024 run, where they had soared to impressive heights with a 93 percentile point finish and a 78% winning rate. This year, however, the team faces an uphill battle, nestled at the bottom of their division and struggling in the lower echelons of the overall rankings. Despite a strong stable of quarterbacks like Jayden Daniels, who ranks among the top three, and Kyler Murray sitting comfortably within the top ten, the team's performance is hampered by a frail receiving corps and subpar tight ends. While their backfield is arguably the strongest in the division, boasting talents like Derrick Henry and Breece Hall, the reliance on Rachaad White as a starter signals potential trouble. The team did secure some value picks, such as drafting Bryce

Young and Cam Ward later than expected, but these strategic wins are overshadowed by questionable decisions, including reaching significantly for players like AJ Dillon. As they navigate a challenging season, Bulls on Parade must hope their formidable running backs can bolster a campaign that currently feels far removed from last year's triumphs.

As the FantasyPastor team gears up for the 2025 fantasy football season, they find themselves in a challenging position, coming off a dominant 2024 campaign where they finished in the top 1% of all teams with a stellar winning percentage. However, this year looks to test their mettle even more. They currently rank near the bottom of their division and are in the lower third percentile overall, signaling a shift from last year's dominance. A notable concern is their weak quarterback lineup, featuring Trevor Lawrence and Tua Tagovailoa, which might hold back their potential for high-scoring performances. In contrast, the running back corps remains a strong point with De'Von Achane and Jonathan Taylor leading the charge, alongside value picks like Chuba Hubbard. Their tight end strategy looks promising in the TE Premium setup, with George Kittle and Evan Engram poised to deliver consistent points, though Jonnu Smith is projected as a weaker link in the starting roster. While the wide receiver group, led by Tee Higgins and D.J. Moore, is solid, it ranks low within the division, indicating room for improvement. The draft strategy saw both smart value acquisitions and some risky reaches, setting the stage for an exciting season. Can FantasyPastor reclaim their former glory and rise through the ranks once more? The upcoming battles will reveal the answer.

TE: Cole Kmet (TE34 | $0 | 19.07)

As the Shraminator gear up for their 2025 fantasy football escapade, expectations are as wild as a squirrel at a nut buffet. Armed with the league's mightiest quarterback duo—Lamar "The Whirlwind" Jackson and Jalen "More Value Than a Discounted Unicorn" Hurts—this team promises aerial pyrotechnics that could make eagles jealous. However, their ground game might be more akin to a gentle stroll in the park, with running backs Kaleb Johnson and Cam Skattebo leading the conga line of mediocrity. Not to mention, their tight end situation is about as effective as trying to catch water with a sieve. In a division where wide receivers swim like dolphins, Shraminator's pass-catchers are more of a mixed aquarium. Marvin Harrison Jr. and Tyreek Hill bring refreshing splashes of brilliance, while Brandon Aiyuk serves as the splash of cold water reminding them of their vulnerabilities. Yet, hope remains buoyant with their small stack bonus of Hurts and DeVonta Smith, ready to deploy double trouble on the field. Positioned intriguingly at 10th in the division, Shraminator also hangs out in the 30th percentile overall, a place perfect for surprise attacks and unexpected victories. Who knows? With some magical maneuvering, they could rise through the ranks like an underdog hero in a bedtime story. Buckle up, it's going to be a whimsical ride through the fantasy season!

In the whimsical realm of the Arch Supporters' 2025 season, where footballs occasionally transform into balloons and helmets sprout wings, the team finds itself tangled in a most peculiar narrative. Ranking 9th amidst the enigmatically named Houston Texans division, their journey is akin to a giraffe navigating a maze. Their wide receivers, a splendid array of aerial acrobats led by the enigmatic Ja'Marr Chase (WR1) and the mercurial Ladd McConkey (WR10), compose symphonies on the field, mesmerizing defenses like pied pipers. Yet, alas, the team's fate rests not on these melodic maestros, but rather on the unpredictable escapades of Jaydon Blue (RB42), whose running style can only be described as a curious blend of jazz improvisation and interpretive dance. Meanwhile, in a curious twist of irony, the team's affinity for reaching has resulted in acquiring Wan'Dale Robinson and Michael Wilson earlier than deemed proper, as if they were rare truffles unearthed by an overzealous pig. Despite these miscalculations, the Arch Supporters stand proudly within the 31st percentile, a testament to their audacity in a universe where football logic defies gravity and expectation.

The 2025 campaign for the Bayou City Bruisers promises to be a whimsical adventure through the enchanted gridiron forest. With their division rank in the middle of the pack and a tournament standing shy of halfway to glory, this squad is poised for a season filled with both triumph and hilarity. The Bruisers boast a magical stable of running backs, led gallantly by Josh Jacobs and his trusty sidekick Kyren Williams, who together form a dynamic duo capable of trampling any foe. Meanwhile, Aaron Jones and D'Andre Swift lurk in the shadows, ready to pounce on unsuspecting defenses like mischievous sprites. However, the wide receiver troupe, starring Jerry Jeudy, has been known to perform vanishing acts more often than thrilling feats, leaving fans wondering if Quentin Johnston might be the hidden gem that finally dazzles the audience. In the realm of tight ends, Brock Bowers reigns supreme, supported by his noble knights Jake Ferguson and Mike Gesicki, who ensure that no ball goes uncatched nor touchdown unseen. The fate of Rhamondre Stevenson hangs in the balance, as his unpredictable escapades could either bolster their standings or send them tumbling, like an overzealous jester at court. Meanwhile, Jared Goff, acquired at a bargain, might just be the secret weapon that propels the Bruisers to unexpected heights, while Ray-Ray McCloud's early pick remains a curious tale yet to unfold. As the season unfolds, the Bruisers' quest for fantasy football glory promises laughter, surprises, and perhaps even a fairy tale ending—or at least some amusing highlights along the way.

As the 2025 season approaches, the Space City 45s prepare to embark on a fantastical odyssey that defies reason and logic, much like a dragon trying to fit into a shoebox. Nestled comfortably in the quagmire of seventh in their celestial division, they've become experts in the art of being neither here nor there—a condition perfectly encapsulated by their mystical 42nd percentile ranking, a testament to their cosmic mediocrity. Their running back fellowship is legendary, with Jahmyr Gibbs leading the charge like a caffeinated unicorn, Kenneth Walker III galloping alongside with the grace of a seasoned tap dancer, and Alvin Kamara orchestrating their chaotic choreography with the flair of a jazz musician trapped in a marching band. However, amid the glorious cacophony, there's Emeka Egbuka, the enigmatic wide receiver—an essential yet unpredictable cog in their fantastical machine. His ability to simultaneously soar and stumble makes him the Schrödinger's receiver of their cosmic quest. While Drake London was summoned from the depths earlier than expected, like a surprise party guest who arrives before the host, his presence brings an unpredictable spark, casting kaleidoscopic shadows across the field. In their mythical draft adventure, they stumbled upon Tucker Kraft, a treasure hidden in plain sight, plucked from obscurity with the stealth of a ninja librarian. Meanwhile, Brashard Smith joined the squad like a misplaced comma—chosen much sooner than anyone anticipated, leaving analysts scratching their heads like bewildered owls in daylight. As the season unfolds, the Space City 45s, with their absurdly unbalanced roster, will dance to the beat of their own drummer, weaving a tapestry of surreal football glory that defies gravity and logic alike.

As the 2025 fantasy football season kicks off, the 3rd Coast Catz are poised to make their mark in a competitive landscape. Ranked 8th in the Houston Texans division, they're in the 41st percentile overall, indicating both room for improvement and potential for a strong finish. A critical storyline this season will be the performance of Keon Coleman, projected as their WR53 starter and considered a vital yet vulnerable position in their lineup. The team's wide receiver depth is commendable, featuring A.J. Brown and Garrett Wilson leading the charge, supported by Courtland Sutton and Xavier Worthy, who benefit from a small stack bonus with star quarterback Patrick Mahomes. This dynamic duo, surprisingly obtained after Mahomes slipped past his expected draft position, adds an intriguing element to the Catz's offensive arsenal. While Bucky Irving was selected slightly early, his presence boosts their running game alongside Raheem Mostert. On the downside, Tank Bigsby's premature selection poses a risk to their value strategy. As the season unfolds, the 3rd Coast Catz will rely on their strategic investments and depth to climb the ranks and challenge their rivals in pursuit of glory.

In the swirling cosmic dance of the 2025 fantasy football season, Team M1A2 emerges like a whimsical chimera, poised between triumph and calamity. Ranked mystically at 5th in their celestial twelve-team Houston Texans constellation, while harmoniously gliding through the 43rd percentile of the grand 5,000-team universe, they are a symphonic riddle wrapped in an enigma. Their fleet-footed centaur, Bijan Robinson, gallops across pixelated pastures as the unrivaled RB1, wielding his pigskin much like a scepter. Meanwhile, Trey Benson, the enigmatic RB44, teeters on the precipice of destiny, his every yard and stumble a cosmic butterfly flap that can ripple through the team's fortunes. The quarterbacks, noble squires Dak Prescott, Michael Penix Jr., and Sam Darnold, are entrusted with navigating the labyrinthine corridors of fantasy with only their wits and a modest arsenal of touchdowns. Wide receivers Amon-Ra St. Brown, a bargain bard taken slightly out of tune, dances alongside Terry McLaurin, Mike Evans, and Jordan Addison, each weaving their own narrative threads into this tapestry of possibility. As the 2025 fantasy football season approaches, The H-Town Blues find themselves in an interesting position. Currently sitting at rank 4 in their division and within the 49th percentile overall, they are looking to build on an average 2024 performance. The team's strength lies in its tight end duo, headlined by Trey McBride, who is expected to be a standout this year. While Dallas Goedert might not have been the first choice for many, his contributions could be pivotal for the team's success. The wide receiver corps presents a mixed bag; while Puka Nacua shows promise, Calvin Ridley and Cooper Kupp may provide more value than anticipated, given where they were drafted. However, with Ridley and Meyers both reflecting middle-of-the-pack potential, the receiving depth could be both a blessing and a challenge. The upcoming season is poised to be unpredictable, but with strategic play and a bit of luck, The H-Town Blues might find themselves climbing higher in the standings.

The codystoots fantasy football team is gearing up for an exciting 2025 season, building on last year's improvements in scoring and game wins. Ranked third in their division and in the 56th percentile overall, they are poised for a competitive run. This year, the team's strength clearly lies in its impressive wide receiver lineup, featuring standouts like Malik Nabers and Brian Thomas Jr., who consistently deliver top-tier performances. While there is room for growth at the quarterback position, with C.J. Stroud and Matthew Stafford needing to step up, the team's strategic decision to invest in these players could pay off. Christian McCaffrey continues to be a reliable presence in the backfield, adding depth and versatility to the roster. With a strong foundation and a focus on key areas of improvement, codystoots is looking forward to a season filled with potential breakthroughs and exciting matchups.

As the 2025 fantasy football season kicks off, TexasTrojanFF is poised for another exciting year, riding high on the momentum of their strong finish last season. Ranked second in their division, they are in a prime position to challenge for the top spot. With a formidable quarterback lineup featuring Joe Burrow, who was a savvy draft pick, Caleb Williams, and Anthony Richardson, this team's aerial attack promises fireworks. The wide receiver corps, led by stars CeeDee Lamb and Chris Godwin, is ready to light up scoreboards, supported by a deep bench that includes Rome Odunze and Deebo Samuel. Even though Kyle Pitts might be one of the more unpredictable players on the roster, his potential to shine adds an element of excitement to every game. With strategic draft moves—like securing Burrow and Lamb at great value—TexasTrojanFF is well-equipped to make waves both in their division and on the larger fantasy stage. This team is set to deliver thrilling performances that could propel them to new heights this season!

The Battle Red Bandits are poised for an exhilarating 2025 season, casting a formidable shadow over both their division and the broader competition. With a roster glittering with promising talent and strategic acquisitions, they stand confidently at the pinnacle of their division and in the elite tier overall. The firepower begins with the electrifying Josh Allen, who ranks as one of the top quarterbacks and promises to deliver explosive performances each week. Bolstered by the youthful zeal of Drake Maye and the seasoned reliability of Geno Smith, their quarterback lineup is second to none. While the running backs may not steal the spotlight, the Bandits' wide receiver corps is nothing short of spectacular; Justin Jefferson and Nico Collins are expected to light up the scoreboard with their dynamic playmaking abilities. Supporting them are Tetairoa McMillan and Jameson

Williams, who bring versatility and speed to the field. In this tight end premium format, Colston Loveland and Sam LaPorta offer pivotal strength, ensuring additional scoring opportunities with their consistent playmaking. The team's strategic draft choices have proven astute, with standout values like Josh Allen and Jameson Williams fortifying an already powerful lineup. At an average starter age of just 24.7 years, the Bandits boast one of the fresher squads in the field, blending youthful energy with established brilliance. As they charge into the new season, the Bandits are positioned to not only dominate their division but also to make a significant impact on the larger stage, embodying a blend of strategy, skill, and potential that is bound to captivate fans and critics alike.
