Scott Fish Bowl Rankings, Analysis, and Team Breakdowns

Rankings are based on actual Scott Fish Bowl ADP from the FantasyLife Scott Fish Bowl tool. Note that in a major tournament like this with nearly 5,000 teams, there are miniscule degrees of separation at play. One player having a breakout season can drastically change a team's results.

These rankings are intended to be entertaining and add in a small way to a wonderful cause. Please consider donating to Fantasy Cares.

As Get Goff My Lawn staggers into the fantasy football coliseum of 2025, one can't help but marvel at their audacious strategy: build a fortress of tight ends and hope the rest simply falls into place. With an ironclad duo of Jayden Daniels and Jared Goff leading the charge, this team appears ready to conquer... or at least mildly inconvenience a few opponents along the way. Their wide receivers, Luther Burden and Rome Odunze, seem less like strategic assets and more like tragic afterthoughts in a roster pieced together with the whimsical misjudgment of a dartboard draft. And then there's the tight end collection, ranging from Sam LaPorta's flash of brilliance to Kyle Pitts' mediocrity, offering all the assurance of a weather forecast predicting both sun and rain. Despite boasting a running back lineup that's mercifully more competent, one can't overlook the team's penchant for reaching—an art they've perfected with the finesse of a toddler playing Jenga. Delighting in the improbability of their picks, they secured Daniel Jones later than anticipated, whilst snatching up Tyler Warren and Pat Freiermuth with a panicked fervor that suggests they mistook this for a clearance sale. As they brace for a season in the cellar of the Las Vegas Raiders division and the lower echelons of the larger competition, it remains to be seen if youth will indeed be wasted on the young.

As The Big O heads into the 2025 season, expectations are anything but high, with their prospects looking grim following a lackluster 2024 performance. This year, their roster appears even more fragile, and it's hard to ignore the glaring weaknesses. Despite reaching for several players in the draft, none have managed to significantly bolster the lineup. Notably, Jordan Mason, who was drafted well above his ADP, remains a projected starter despite being ranked as the RB38, underscoring the team's desperate situation at running back. Meanwhile, the receiving corps, spearheaded by Puka Nacua and Terry McLaurin, ranks a disappointing ninth in the division, unable to offer much optimism for improvement. Even the tight end position, where bold choices like Mark Andrews and Tucker Kraft were prematurely picked, has not delivered the expected edge. With these missteps, The Big O finds themselves languishing in the lower echelons of both the division and the broader competition, ranking 11th in the Las Vegas Raiders division and a dismal 6th percentile overall. This team, having gambled on early picks that didn't pay off, seems destined for another year of mediocrity at best.

As thebigdawgz prepare to slog through another challenging season, their prospects appear dim. With a division rank of 10 and struggling to rise above the bottom tier at the 15th percentile overall, it's hard to find optimism. The glaring weakness in the running back position, where Kaleb Johnson ranks at RB27, leaves the team vulnerable and unable to establish any ground game dominance. While their wide receiver corps boasts some strong performers like Amon-Ra St. Brown and Ladd McConkey, the inclusion of Emeka Egbuka as a starter highlights the depth issues that could haunt them throughout the season. Despite managing to draft a few players below their average draft position, such as Chris Olave and Deebo Samuel, questionable early picks like Justin Herbert and Jaylin Noel dulled any potential edge. Even the tight end strength with Brock Bowers and T.J.

Hockenson isn't enough to compensate for strategic missteps and positional weaknesses. In a division where even a small mistake can be costly, thebigdawgz face an uphill battle to avoid another forgettable season marred by unfulfilled expectations and missed opportunities.

TE: Theo Johnson (TE29 | $0 | 16.08)

As the 2025 fantasy season looms, FettsBountyHunters finds itself mired in mediocrity and uncertainty, with a team that's looking more like a scattershot collection of mismatched puzzle pieces than a cohesive unit poised for success. Despite boasting a cadre of talented wide receivers, headlined by the likes of Justin Jefferson and Malik Nabers, the squad's glaring weaknesses at tight end and running back threaten to undermine any potential offensive fireworks. The team's reliance on Matthew Golden, whose performance could be as volatile as a desert wind, casts a long shadow over their prospects. Indeed, with the division rank languishing at ninth and a tournament standing as dismal as the 25th percentile, FettsBountyHunters faces an uphill battle. While there was some shrewd drafting, with value picks like Cam Ward and Courtland Sutton offering glimmers of hope, the team's overreach to snag Bo Nix earlier than necessary might expose them to further ridicule. The small synergy boost from the Sutton-Nix connection is a drop in an otherwise barren well, leaving this team pinning their hopes on uncertain ground. As the season dawns, anticipation is tempered by a sobering reality, as the prospect of climbing the ranks seems more daunting than ever.

TE: Dalton Kincaid (S) (TE13 | $4 | 10.02), Mason Taylor (TE23 | $0 | 13.11)

As the 2025 fantasy football season approaches, Bo Knows finds itself in a precarious position, facing both encouraging prospects and lingering uncertainties. Coming off a below-average performance last year, where they landed in the lower third for scoring and managed to win just under a third of their matchups, the team looks to turn the tide this season. Ranked eighth in their division and sitting in the 33rd percentile overall, the crew is looking to leverage their youth and quarterback prowess to climb the ranks. Quarterbacks are undeniably the team's strongest suit, with the formidable trio of Josh Allen, Joe Burrow, and Dak Prescott poised to lead the charge. However, the key to unlocking success might lie in the hands of running back Bhayshul Tuten, whose performance could be pivotal given his starting role despite being one of the team's weaker links.

The wide receiver squad, featuring talents like Jaxon Smith-Njigba and Garrett Wilson, ranks mid-pack but offers potential for breakout moments that could elevate the team's standing. Draft strategy adds another layer of intrigue; while Bo Knows secured significant value with acquisitions like Roschon Johnson and particularly Josh Downs, they also reached for talents such as Josh Allen. This calculated risk-taking might pay dividends if these players exceed expectations. As one of the younger teams in the competition, Bo Knows is banking on growth and development to fuel a rise in the standings, hoping that their blend of promising talent and strategic gambles will yield a more successful campaign than last year's effort.

TE: Juwan Johnson (TE31 | $0 | 18.05)

As rugbyrob10 gears up for the 2025 fantasy football season, there's a mixture of optimism and caution swirling around this dynamic squad. Heading into competition, their wide receiver lineup is undeniably formidable, featuring top talent like Ja'Marr Chase, who stands as the premier WR1, alongside other heavy-hitters like Travis Hunter and Davante Adams. This depth at wide receiver could serve as a strong backbone for the team's performance throughout the season. Meanwhile, their tight end situation presents more uncertainty, lacking the same level of standout talent and depth. However, it's not all smooth sailing. The running back position might be their Achilles' heel, with Cam Skattebo, despite being a crucial starter, potentially being the weak link in this otherwise solid team. His performance will be pivotal; any struggles on his part could hinder rugbyrob10's chances to climb higher in both their division and overall standings. While some strategic draft choices were made, like securing Cam Skattebo later than expected, other decisions such as reaching early for players like Jakobi Meyers and Khalil Shakir might pose risks if those players fail to exceed their anticipated performances. Nevertheless, with Breece Hall leading the charge in the backfield, there's hope that the team can maintain a competitive edge. As the season unfolds, rugbyrob10 will look to capitalize on their strengths and manage their vulnerabilities to improve their standing in the challenging fantasy landscape.

As the 2025 fantasy football season kicks off, Gill-ty Pleasures is poised for an intriguing campaign. Currently sitting in the middle of their division standings and just over the 50th percentile overall, this team has the potential to climb the ranks with a strong roster of wide receivers. The dynamic quartet of Rashee Rice, Tee Higgins, D.J. Moore, and DeVonta Smith provides a solid foundation, with Zay Flowers adding depth and upside to the lineup. Notably, the team managed to secure excellent value in the draft, particularly with the savvy late selection of Zay Flowers, who fell well past his projected spot. While Isaiah Likely's performance as TE18 will be a critical factor to watch, the team's strategic drafting decisions, including the shrewd acquisition of Justice Hill and DeVonta Smith at favorable ADPs, indicate a thoughtful approach that could yield dividends. As the season unfolds, Gill-ty Pleasures aims to leverage these strengths to make significant strides in both their division and overall standings.

As the MFers gear up for an exciting 2025 fantasy football season, there's palpable optimism surrounding their promising lineup, especially given their formidable running back corps. With Bijan Robinson leading the charge as the top-ranked RB and De'Von Achane providing impressive support, the team is poised to dominate on the ground like never before. The addition of Alvin Kamara and James Conner further cements their backfield prowess, offering depth and versatility that could be the envy of many competitors. While their wide receiver lineup isn't as stellar, with Stefon Diggs and Jayden Higgins needing to step up, there's potential for growth and surprise performances. Higgins, in particular, could be a crucial piece; his development might just tip the scales in crucial matchups. Smart draft choices also give the MFers an edge, with J.J. McCarthy and De'Von Achane picked at remarkable value, ready to make significant contributions. Despite reaching for a few players earlier than expected, the MFers have crafted a dynamic and balanced roster that could see them rise through the ranks in their division and beyond. Positioned solidly in both their division and overall standings, the team's potential is unmistakable, and with some key performances, this season might just be one for the books.

As the dawn of the 2025 fantasy football season breaks, Kittle and Bits stands poised on the precipice of greatness, ready to unleash a symphony of gridiron glory upon their adversaries. With a triumphant 2024 season etched in their history, finishing in the illustrious 67th percentile, this team enters the arena with renewed vigor and aspirations reaching towards the heavens. Ranked 4th in their fiercely competitive division of the Las Vegas Raiders and boasting a 72nd percentile ranking overall, Kittle and Bits has meticulously assembled a squad that mirrors both strength and potential. While Brock Purdy commands the helm at QB14, it is the cavalry of running backs—led by the indomitable Ashton Jeanty at RB4 and followed by James Cook, Chuba Hubbard, and a supporting cast that could rival any battalion—that promises to trample over opposition defenses. The team's strategic acumen shines brightest in its tight end corps, an unrivaled fortress featuring luminaries like Trey McBride, George Kittle, and Evan Engram, ensuring TE supremacy throughout the realm. Yet, the narrative of this epic journey may hinge upon Darnell Mooney, whose role as a projected starter injects both intrigue and tension into the unfolding saga. As the season unfurls, Kittle and Bits will navigate the labyrinthine paths of competition, where their formidable roster construction—a harmonious blend of shrewd draft values and daring reaches—will either etch their names among the legends or serve as a cautionary tale of ambition unfulfilled. In this grand tapestry of fantasy football, they stand ready to carve their legacy, one play at a time.

As the horizon of the 2025 fantasy football season unfurls, the Yuma Yummies stand poised to etch their indelible mark upon the annals of competitive glory. Anchored by an awe-inspiring cadre of wide receivers, with CeeDee Lamb gracing the field as a top-tier threat, flanked by the electrifying Nico Collins and the ever-reliable A.J. Brown, this team is a juggernaut in the making. Their potent arsenal extends further, featuring the dynamic duo of Chris Godwin and Jaylen Waddle, both of whom offer deceptive depth and undeniable talent, while Rashid Shaheed rounds out the attack with thrilling promise. Spearheading their offensive strategy is Saquon Barkley, carved from the purest granite of running back greatness, bringing his formidable prowess to bear despite the backdrop of a division where running backs are as varied as the desert landscape. Alongside Barkley, Tyjae Spears brings his tenacity to the fore, undeterred by being the underdog, while Caleb Williams takes the helm as the master conductor of this symphony of stars. The Yummies' draft acumen shone brightly, harnessing the celestial energy of value picks that include Saquon Barkley, A.J. Brown, and Jaylen Waddle, each secured at a shrewd bargain, weaving together a tapestry of excellence that promises to propel them to greater echelons. Though some choices, such as Travis Etienne and Tyler Conklin, might seem like bold gambits, they add an unpredictable flair to an ensemble already enriched with star power. Now ranked third in their division and soaring in the esteemed 92nd percentile overall, the Yuma Yummies are set to embark on a campaign that could see them rise from contender to conqueror, driven by a vision as limitless as the arid expanse from which they draw their name.

As the 2025 fantasy football season kicks off, Mr. Chow is poised for a remarkable campaign, already ranking impressively at second in the competitive Las Vegas Raiders division and soaring in the 94th percentile overall. Building on their determination to turn the tides from last year's struggles, Mr. Chow boasts a powerhouse backfield featuring Christian McCaffrey and Derrick Henry, both top-tier running backs ready to lead the charge. The wide receiver corps is equally formidable, highlighted by Brian Thomas Jr., Marvin Harrison Jr., and the electrifying Tyreek Hill, ensuring dynamic performances week in and week out. The savvy draft strategy landed them exceptional value picks like Jerome Ford and Xavier Worthy, adding depth and unexpected firepower to their roster. With strategic acumen and a little luck, Mr. Chow is not only aiming for dominance within their division but also eyeing a deep run in the season's grand tournament. As the team refines its synergy and squeezes maximum potential from its formidable lineup, all eyes are on Mr. Chow to break new ground and achieve unprecedented heights this season.

Sitting proudly atop their division and within the elite echelon of fantasy teams at the 95th percentile, their transformation from last year's underwhelming performance is nothing short of remarkable. The explosive quarterback duo of Lamar Jackson and Patrick Mahomes promises to ignite the scoreboard, providing the Wildcats with unrivaled firepower. Meanwhile, Matthew Stafford brings experience and value to the mix, having been acquired at a steal. While the tight end position remains a work in progress with Zach Ertz, the Wildcats' receiving corps, led by the dynamic Drake London, ensures plenty of aerial prowess. Tony Pollard's savvy acquisition adds depth to a backfield where J.K. Dobbins aims to defy expectations. With key players like Cedric Tillman acquired late for exceptional value, the Wildcats have masterfully navigated the draft, positioning themselves for a triumphant campaign. As they charge into this season, the Wildcats have set the stage for a thrilling display of dominance and resilience, ready to cement their legacy on the fantasy football landscape.
