There is a particular kind of tired that sets in when you look at a roster and realize the ceiling and the floor are basically the same room. Kika22 finished 2025 in the 18th percentile, and the 2026 projections offer little reason to book a different destination, with the team sitting 12th in the Abby division and in just the 4th percentile of the field. The draft did not help. Of 20 picks, there were zero steals and three major reaches, including Bucky Irving taken nearly two and a half rounds before his ADP and J.K. Dobbins grabbed over three rounds early. Those aggressive bets did not uncover hidden value, they simply paid a premium for average outcomes. Drake Maye grades out as QB2 and is the clearest bright spot, and the Patrick Mahomes and Rashee Rice stack adds some upside, but below that top tier the roster thins into a cluster of mid-range projections with nothing explosive waiting in reserve. Kika22 can hope the reaches hit. Hope is not a strategy, but right now it might be the whole plan.

TE:

There is a specific kind of fantasy misery that comes not from catastrophe but from accumulation, and Egarciaglez is living it. Sitting 11th in the Abby division and in just the 5th percentile of the field, this roster was largely assembled on chalk, with no steals to point to and a draft board that leaned on reaching rather than waiting. The biggest swing, taking Jayden Daniels at 2.02 when his ADP sat nearly a full round later at 2.12, reflects a manager who trusts conviction over market price, which is fine when it works. The anchor of the lineup is real: Derrick Henry at RB12, Josh Jacobs at RB16, and Travis Etienne at RB18 form a credible core, and Amon-Ra St. Brown at WR4 gives this team a genuine top-end asset. But the projected starter floor drops off quickly, with Michael Pittman projecting as WR44 and earning the label of weakest projected starter on the roster. When your ceiling is asking a lot and your floor is asking more, the math does not move in your favor, and right now there is no obvious lever left to pull.

There is no polite way to say this: Jaimes1917 is in trouble. Sitting at the 15th percentile of the field and dead last in the Abby division, this roster has a ceiling problem that good vibes cannot fix. The backfield anchored by Jonathan Taylor at RB4 and James Cook at RB5 is genuinely excellent, but the production has to come from somewhere, and the rest of the depth chart offers diminishing returns fast. The receiver group projects as average at best, with Tetairoa McMillan at WR15 as the clear top option and a steep drop to Davante Adams at WR25 before things get uncomfortable quickly. The draft process did not help matters either, producing zero steals, one value, and a major reach on Hunter Henry at TE18, taken more than two rounds ahead of his ADP. When your most aggressive draft-day swing is on a tight end projecting outside the top fifteen at his position, the margin for error is razor thin. Jaimes1917 needed bold, and bold never arrived.

There is something quietly devastating about watching a 90th-percentile team dissolve into a 21st-percentile projection, and carlosguemez is living that reality in 2026. Last year's version of this roster was a scoring machine, 4990 points and a 28-8 record that felt inevitable by October. This year the engine looks different. The backfield is genuinely impressive, with Jahmyr Gibbs at RB1 and Omarion Hampton at RB9 anchoring a group that gives carlosguemez real weekly floors, and the draft reflects confidence in that group, Hampton and Jeremiyah Love both taken before their ADP. But the receiver corps is where the gap between reputation and reality becomes painful. Jordan Addison leads that group at WR43, and the names behind her fall off quickly, McMillan at WR59, Adonai Mitchell at WR67, a trail of question marks dressed up as depth. Justin Herbert at QB8 was a genuine value, and he matters, but he cannot close a gap this wide. Ninth in the Abby division is not where last year's carlosguemez was supposed to land.

The Bitboyz enter 2026 sitting eighth in the Abby division and hovering around the 32nd percentile of the field, and the roster doesn't offer much reason for optimism. The receiving group has genuine upside, headlined by Jaxon Smith-Njigba at WR3 and Chris Olave at WR11, and the backfield is legitimately strong with De'Von Achane at RB6 and Breece Hall at RB14 anchoring the group. The problem is that the quarterback situation is where this team's ceiling goes to die. Jordan Love projects as QB17, which would be concerning enough on its own, but the Love scouting report reads like a fantasy manager's nightmare: he wins real games, keeps the Packers respectable, and then quietly finishes outside the top ten in fantasy scoring. Green Bay keeps promising to lean on his arm more, and yet the receiving room still lacks a true alpha and Tucker Kraft is returning from injury. Love is essentially a good NFL quarterback who moonlights as a mediocre fantasy one, and when your upside at the position is QB17, there is no lever left to pull here.

taavoe did not build this roster with one flashy swing. They built it by consistently coming out ahead on price. Puka Nacua lands as WR1 in projections and taavoe got him at 1.08 when the room had him valued at 1.01, a modest slip that still represents found money at the top of the draft. Chase Brown, projected RB11 and a projected starter, slid nearly a full round past his ADP to 4.05. Chigoziem Okonkwo fell a round and a half to 12.05. Michael Wilson fell more than a round to 10.05. None of those are lottery-ticket gambles, they are just quiet wins stacked on top of each other, which is exactly how a team finishes 64th percentile in the field. The one blemish is Shedeur Sanders, a three-round reach at QB32, but Jalen Hurts and Brock Purdy project as starters ahead of him, so the cost matters more than the player does. This is a roster built on discipline, and in a format this deep, discipline compounds.

Plerck412 didn't swing for the fences and miss, they just kept connecting. The clearest evidence is at the top of the roster: Ja'Marr Chase fell to pick 1.06 despite projecting as WR2, and Tyler Warren slipped to 4.07 despite projecting as TE4, giving this team two elite-tier starters without having to overpay for either. Saquon Barkley at RB8 anchors the ground game, and the Jaxson Dart and Isaiah Likely stack adds a sneaky weekly correlation bonus that could matter when the margins get thin. The one blemish worth noting is Omar Cooper Jr., a reach of nearly three rounds at pick 11.06 for a player projecting as WR60, and that kind of aggressive move on a speculative piece is exactly the type of thing that haunts a roster come playoff time. Still, one reach doesn't erase a draft where the values found their way home. Sitting sixth in the Abby division at the 65th percentile, Plerck412 has the ceiling to move up.

RicardoVGV didn't win the draft with one flashy pick. They won it by being right more often than not, and the cumulative advantage shows. The centerpiece is a receiver corps that projects four starters, led by Justin Jefferson at WR6 and Zay Flowers at WR16, with Jameson Williams at WR21 and Marvin Harrison Jr. at WR33 adding legitimate depth behind them. That group alone would carry most rosters, but RicardoVGV layered in something even more unusual at the tight end spot: Brock Bowers at TE1, taken two picks into the draft after slipping half a round past his ADP, gives this team a weekly edge that compounds over a long season. The Jared Goff and Williams stack adds a ceiling-raising correlation on high-volume game weeks. A 74th percentile projection and a fifth-place division ranking are not the ceiling here. They are the floor for a team built on consistency rather than luck, and in the Scott Fish Bowl, that kind of quiet competence tends to age well.

DavePM1093 lands at third in the division and the 76th percentile of the field, and the draft tape explains exactly why: this was a roster built round by round, not rescued by one lucky swing. The crown jewel is Trey McBride, a TE2 projection snagged at pick 2.04 when his ADP sat nearly a full round earlier, which means Dave got one of the best tight ends in the tournament while the rest of the room was still figuring out their quarterback plans. CeeDee Lamb at WR5 and Kenneth Walker III at RB10 give the lineup a legitimate top-end core, and DeVonta Smith at WR14 and Terry McLaurin at WR24 keep the quality from falling off a cliff. Baker Mayfield arriving at 9.09 when his ADP was two full rounds earlier is the kind of quiet win that separates competent drafters from good ones. The late-round reaches on Jaylen Wright and Mike Washington Jr. are real question marks, but when your weakest projected starter is Jayden Reed at WR48, you are not losing sleep on Sunday nights.

EduardoCC28 didn't win the draft with one flashy pick. They won it by never losing it. The foundation is legitimate: Christian McCaffrey at RB3 was a minor reach at 1.05, but when you're getting a top-three back you're not apologizing for it. Lamar Jackson at QB3 slipped a few spots past his ADP and landed right where EduardoCC28 needed him, and Matthew Stafford falling two and a half full rounds to 8.08 is the kind of windfall that quietly upgrades everything around it. Add Malik Nabers, Garrett Wilson, and Tee Higgins as projected starting receivers and you have a core that plays up against anyone in the Abby division. The one genuine question mark is RJ Harvey, the projected weakest starter at RB28, who heads into 2026 behind JK Dobbins on the depth chart with Denver having added Jonah Coleman in the draft, making his path to consistent production genuinely murky. But one uncertain piece on a roster this layered is a footnote, not a flaw. Seventy-sixth percentile in the field, and built to push higher.

JADT drafted like a team that already knew it was going to finish at the 92nd percentile and was simply executing the plan. The foundation is immovable: Josh Allen at QB1 anchors the whole operation, and while taking him first overall was a minor reach against ADP, you do not apologize for landing a QB1 in a positionless format. From there, the value board just kept delivering. Joe Burrow, Kyle Pitts, Mark Andrews, all taken past their ADPs, all projected starters. The receiver group is where this roster quietly announces itself, with A.J. Brown at WR8, Ladd McConkey at WR20, and Jaylen Waddle at WR23 headlining a corps that has real depth behind the top names. Waddle is particularly interesting, moving out of Miami's dysfunction and into Denver, where Bo Nix threw the ball at a historic rate last season. Five good values, one steal, one minor reach, zero major reaches. That is not a draft, that is a proof of concept. This team came to the Scott Fish Bowl with a blueprint and a pencil, and it did not smudge a single line.

ddshap sits first in the Abby division and in the 98th percentile of the entire field, and the draft sheet explains exactly why. The receiver corps alone is a statement: Nico Collins (WR9), Emeka Egbuka (WR18), and Luther Burden (WR22) give this team three projected starters who all crack the top 25 at the position, and Jordyn Tyson (WR34) is sitting behind them as insurance most managers would kill for. The tight end situation is quietly the crown jewel, though. Tucker Kraft (TE5) was a steal taken more than two rounds after his ADP, and Harold Fannin (TE6) fell nearly a round and a half into ddshap's hands as well. Fannin outplayed a veteran starter in Cleveland last year and now steps into a larger role, Browns quarterback situation be what it may. Bijan Robinson (RB2) anchors the backfield as a clear top-two option at the position. Two steals, two values, one minor reach, and zero major reaches: that is a draft where the manager made the board work for them, not the other way around.
