There is no easy way to spin this one. matthewbetz sits 12th in the NHL94 division and in just the 7th percentile of the entire field, and the roster construction does not suggest a dramatic reversal is coming. The foundation looks appealing on paper: Josh Allen is a QB1, and Saquon Barkley projects as a starter. But Barkley is the quiet concern at the center of this whole thing. After his historic 2024 campaign, he posted a significant step back in 2025 while the Eagles offensive line cycled through injuries, and now at 29 there are reports Philadelphia wants to lighten his workload going forward. A reduced-role Barkley is a different asset than the one matthewbetz may have been drafting. Beyond those two names, the starting receivers top out at Terry McLaurin at WR24, and the draft offered no margin for error, producing zero steals and zero values against 15 chalk picks. This roster ran a 28th-percentile scoring season in 2025, and with no obvious upgrade path in sight, optimism here requires more faith than evidence supports.

DrakeFantasy enters 2026 sitting 11th in the NHL94 division and projected in just the 21st percentile of the field, and there is no obvious rescue operation in sight. The roster's saving grace is a genuinely elite group of projected starters headlined by Ja'Marr Chase (WR2), Nico Collins (WR9), and Chris Olave (WR11), but the floor collapses fast once you look beyond the receivers. Geno Smith grades out as a QB30, J.K. Dobbins sits at RB36 as the projected weakest starter, and the tight end room offers TE19 Chigoziem Okonkwo and a creaky TJ Hockenson at TE23. The Michael Pittman situation does not inspire confidence either: the veteran lands in Pittsburgh alongside an aging Aaron Rodgers on an offense still searching for an identity under a new coaching staff, which makes Pittman's WR44 projection feel optimistic rather than conservative. The draft offered no steals and no real values, just fifteen picks at chalk and four minor reaches. Chase is dazzling enough to win any given week, but a roster this lopsided at the top is a house built on one foundation stone, and the standings project it cracking.

AppleGarthAlgar enters 2026 sitting 10th in the NHL94 division and at just the 29th tournament percentile, which means the margin for error is essentially nonexistent. The top of the roster is genuinely appealing: Lamar Jackson as a QB3 anchor, Amon-Ra St. Brown at WR4, and a Goff/St. Brown stack that should produce reliable weekly volume given how dynamic Detroit's offense has been. But this is where the good news stalls. Jared Goff is a perfectly fine QB16 with a track record of steady production, though calling him a difference-maker requires a generosity of spirit the standings will not reward. The draft did nothing to create separation, logging 15 chalk picks, zero steals, and a four-round reach on Tyquan Thornton, who projects as WR97. When your weakest projected starter is Wan'Dale Robinson at WR47 and your path to contention runs through hoping chalk hits at full value, you are not building a winner, you are building a prayer. Last season's 36 percent win rate was not an aberration. It was a preview.

NoisyHuevos walked into the 2026 Scott Fish Bowl draft and somehow found ways to make even the good picks feel accidental. Christian McCaffrey at RB3 lands at pick 2.02 when his ADP was 1.09, which is less "value" and more "the person ahead of you blinked." From there, the draft unraveled in the particular way that only happens when a manager has strong opinions and limited evidence. Jaxson Dart, reached 1.6 rounds early to sit at QB11, is the kind of quarterback whose fantasy ceiling inspires genuine excitement right up until he is jogging to the medical tent for a concussion evaluation, which happened with uncomfortable regularity last season. Pairing him with Malik Nabers at WR12 gives the stack some legitimate upside, but betting on Dart to deliver the passing volume required to make that stack hum is a faith-based exercise. The roster logged four major reaches and zero steals, finished in the 29th percentile of the field, and projects ninth in the division. There is no charitable read available here. The draft confirmed it.

TE: Jake Ferguson (S) (TE12 | $8 | 9.02) ♦, AJ Barner (TE24 | $2 | 13.02)

Last year's 85th-percentile Heaney squad is mostly a memory now, and the 2026 version sitting at 48th percentile and eighth in the NHL94 division is doing a pretty convincing impression of a team coasting on a reputation it hasn't earned yet. The foundation is real: Jahmyr Gibbs at RB1 is a genuine anchor, and Zay Flowers at WR16 gives the lineup legitimate upside. But the draft strategy is where the gap between last year's Heaney and this year's becomes uncomfortable to stare at. Not a single steal or value across the entire board, fourteen chalk picks, and a major reach on Dontayvion Wicks pulled 4.6 rounds before his ADP, which is a bold statement on behalf of a WR96. Dak Prescott and Jake Ferguson offer a stacking bonus, but Prescott comes in as QB7, a useful number rather than a dominant one. This roster has the skeleton of a functional team and the draft fingerprints of someone who believed last year's results more than this year's projections warranted.

tejohns sits at the tournament's exact midpoint, 50th percentile, division rank 7, the kind of roster that makes opponents exhale before kickoff rather than sweat. The ceiling is real: Drake Maye at QB2 paired with A.J. Brown at WR8 gives this team a genuine stack that can go nuclear on any given week, and Harold Fannin at TE6 is the sort of positional advantage that quietly separates comfortable weeks from desperate ones. The floor, though, is where the margins live. Brown was the one significant reach of the draft, taken at 2.01 against an ADP of 2.10, a minor gamble that paid off in projected rank but signals tejohns was building around a specific vision rather than accumulating value. When that vision hums, the stack carries the lineup. When it doesn't, the fallback options thin out quickly, with Michael Wilson at WR39 anchoring the weakest projected starting spot on the roster. Derrick Henry at RB12 and Rashee Rice at WR13 keep the floor from collapsing entirely, but tejohns wins or loses in the margins, and the margins here are honest about how thin they are.

PatFitz sits at 54th percentile heading into 2026, and that number tells the whole story: good enough to stay competitive, not quite good enough to feel safe. The ceiling is real. Justin Jefferson at WR6, Colston Loveland at TE3, and Joe Burrow at QB4 give this roster genuine upside, and the Burrow-Tee Higgins stack adds a correlated punch that can swing a week in either direction. But the floor has some soft spots. Higgins projects at WR19 and Jaylen Waddle at WR23, solid contributors both, yet the back end of this roster shows the cost of aggressive late-round conviction, with Elic Ayomanor at WR95 and Elijah Sarratt at WR98 arriving well ahead of consensus. Those reaches may pan out, but they represent bets, not certainties. A 50 percent win rate in 2025 suggests PatFitz already lives in this exact neighborhood, where the margin between a winning week and a losing one is thin, and the draft did little to widen it.

kcjoynertfs didn't swing for the fences and miss, they just kept making the right call, round after round. The backbone of this roster is a loaded group headlined by Bijan Robinson (RB2) and James Cook (RB5), both projected starters, with Cook arriving as a value after sliding past his ADP by nearly half a round. Ashton Jeanty (RB7) adds another starter-caliber piece, and the draft board cooperated there too, delivering Jeanty about seven tenths of a round later than consensus expected. The overall draft profile bears that out: five values against just three major reaches across the whole roster. Trevor Lawrence (QB10) anchors the position with legitimate upside, and while the wide receiver group projects modestly, this format rewards managers who field their best players in any mix, and kcjoynertfs has plenty to work with. Sitting fifth in the NHL94 division and at the 57th percentile feels like a floor more than a ceiling for a team built this quietly well.

RB: Kyren Williams (S) (RB15 | $17 | 5.04), RJ Harvey (S) (RB28 | $4 | 11.04), Tyler Allgeier (RB46 | $1 | 15.04), Nicholas Singleton (RB57 | $0 | 16.09)

WR: Drake London (S) (WR7 | $39 | 2.09), Garrett Wilson (S) (WR17 | $24 | 4.09), Mike Evans (S) (WR27 | $13 | 6.09), Rome Odunze (S) (WR30 | $12 | 7.04) ♦, Jalen Nailor (WR61 | $1 | 14.09), Ted Hurst (WR85 | $0 | 17.04), Chris Bell (WR87 | $0 | 18.09), Ja'Kobi Lane (WR89 | $0 | 19.04)

TE: Brock Bowers (S) (TE1 | $53 | 1.04), Dalton Kincaid (S) (TE11 | $10 | 8.09), Hunter Henry (TE18 | $4 | 13.04), Dalton Schultz (TE22 | $3 | 12.09)

KTee15 didn't win the draft on one bold swing, they won it on volume and patience, round after round coming out slightly ahead. The clearest example is Brock Bowers, a TE1 who anchors a starting group that also features Drake London at WR7 and Garrett Wilson at WR17, the kind of top-end foundation that makes a roster genuinely dangerous before you even get to the depth. Caleb Williams at QB6, stacked with Rome Odunze, adds another layer that projects well into the season. Then there's the late-round quiet work: Hunter Henry came in as TE18 at pick 13.04 after an ADP of 10.07, nearly three rounds of free equity sitting in the back half of the draft. That's not luck, that's a manager who did the homework. Sixteen chalk picks might sound boring, but when your chalk includes Bowers, London, and Wilson, boring looks a lot like a 59th-percentile roster with real upside still hiding in it.

BrandonMileski didn't win the draft with one flashy pick. He won it by being right over and over again. Landing Puka Nacua at WR1 at 1.06 when the consensus had him going fifth overall is the kind of slight edge that compounds, and then Mileski kept finding those edges deeper in the pool, nabbing Josh Jacobs at RB16 a full round and a half after he should have been gone. The minor reaches scattered across the board, players like Javonte Williams and Jadarian Price taken a round early, reflect confidence rather than panic, a manager who knew what he wanted and paid a modest premium to get it. The result is a starting corps anchored by De'Von Achane at RB6 and Omarion Hampton at RB9, with Nacua operating as arguably the tournament's top receiver. That core put Mileski third in the NHL94 division and into the 77th percentile field-wide, and after a 39-percent win rate in 2025, this looks like the roster construction of someone who did his homework and came back with receipts.

InSeasonCup didn't win the draft with one flashy pick. They won it by consistently being the last one paying attention when the board slipped. Jeremiyah Love landed at RB13 a full round after his ADP suggested he'd be gone, and Chris Godwin came off the board nearly a round and a half late at WR38, quietly filling out a receiver group that already had Jaxon Smith-Njigba at WR3 and George Pickens at WR10 anchoring it. Add DeVonta Smith at WR14 and you have a starting core that most managers would have paid a premium to assemble, yet InSeasonCup built it without a single major reach on the entire sheet. The one mild overpay was Jayden Daniels at QB5, taken about half a round early, but that's the kind of concession you make willingly when the rest of the draft keeps returning value. Sitting second in the NHL94 division and in the 79th percentile of the field, this roster looks exactly like what it is: a draft where the process was right nearly every single time.

TheBishop83 sits atop the NHL94 division heading into 2026, and the draft tells you exactly why: this roster was built through relentless execution rather than any single lightning-strike moment. Fifteen chalk picks and zero major reaches is the signature of a manager who knew their board and stuck to it, and the results show up everywhere you look. The tight end group alone would make most managers envious, with Trey McBride at TE2, Tyler Warren at TE4, Tucker Kraft at TE5, and Kyle Pitts at TE7 all projecting as starters in a positionless format that rewards exactly this kind of positional depth. Add Jonathan Taylor at RB4 as the anchor of the backfield, and TheBishop83 has assembled a core that consistently projects to outscore opponents without relying on a single boom-or-bust swing. The 2025 campaign landed in the 41st percentile, so there is something to prove. But the 84th percentile projection and a division title already suggest the roster construction is pointing in the right direction.
