Scott Fish Bowl Rankings, Analysis, and Team Breakdowns

Rankings are based on actual Scott Fish Bowl ADP from the FantasyLife Scott Fish Bowl tool. Note that in a major tournament like this with nearly 5,000 teams, there are miniscule degrees of separation at play. One player having a breakout season can drastically change a team's results.

These rankings are intended to be entertaining and add in a small way to a wonderful cause. Please consider donating to Fantasy Cares.

Ah, the SanMarcosBobcats, poised for yet another illustrious campaign in 2025, or maybe just an exercise in futility masquerading as a fantasy football season. Occupying the prestigious 12th spot in their division, the New Jersey Devils, and nestled comfortably in the lower echelons of the tournament percentile, they seem well-prepared to dazzle with mediocrity. Anchoring this powerhouse roster is Jonnu Smith, the TE15, whose projected starting role adds a particular flavor of vulnerability to an already suspect lineup. The WR corps, led by the indomitable Justin Jefferson, manages to shine somewhat, even if saddled with the likes of Jameson Williams and Brandon Aiyuk, who seem more interested in the scenery on the field than scoring points. Notably, the Bobcats exhibited a keen sense of value in snagging Rhamondre Stevenson and Jefferson after their ADPs, perhaps hoping late-round magic will offset premature reaches like Jared Goff and Jonnu Smith—because who doesn't love rolling the dice on someone no one else wanted so early? And then there's that inspired quarterback choice, Kyler Murray, chosen gallantly ahead of schedule, signifying either a daring strategy or a simple case of misplaced optimism. With such astute planning, it's no wonder the Bobcats are prime contenders for a spectacularly average season.

As the 2025 fantasy football season looms, team aerickson prepares to dazzle the competition—or at least entertain with its peculiar brand of mediocrity. A squad that gallantly stumbled through last year's campaign, finishing in the impressively unremarkable 21st percentile, now seeks redemption among thousands. With a quarterback trio that includes the esteemed Jayden Daniels, this team can rest easy knowing that if football were won by throwing alone, they'd still have a fighting chance. But alas, the game demands more than aerial antics, leaving the anemic running back duo of Kaleb Johnson and Jordan Mason—drafted with more optimism than logic—to flounder under the weight of expectation. In a baffling act of fiscal responsibility, the team snagged Johnson later than average draft projections suggested, a move that brought brief applause before realization set in that he was still their best option. The receiving corps, a beacon of hope with the likes of Brian Thomas Jr. and A.J. Brown, might find themselves wondering if they wandered into the wrong huddle amid a tight end surplus boasting Tyler Warren and T.J. Hockenson. As the season kicks off, aerickson sits comfortably near the bottom of their division, securing their rank as the team most likely to surprise —by winning a single game more than expected.

As we brace ourselves for CoachEsser's 2025 fantasy football escapade, one can't help but marvel at their precarious strategy that positions them just shy of mediocrity. In a thrilling division where they rank a triumphant tenth, CoachEsser's masterstroke lies in their quarterback prowess, evidenced by the bold decision to reach for Michael Penix Jr., a beacon of inconsistency at QB21. While their wide receiver lineup might occasionally resemble a constellation with Malik Nabers shining brightly as WR4, it's amusing how Stefon Diggs, acquired at an apparent bargain, still finds himself buried deeper than anticipated at WR44. Meanwhile, the almighty tournament percentile doesn't quite echo their hopes, as they float in the illustrious 26th percentile, a realm where dreams of relevancy teeter on the edge of oblivion. CoachEsser's knack for drafting Joe Burrow prematurely at 1.05 is a testament to their love for cinematic suspense, while Russell Wilson's selection screams the sort of optimism only rivaled by a doomed game of Jenga. As the season unfolds, one can only watch in awe, or perhaps wry amusement, to see if these pioneers of paradox can defy the odds—or further affirm them.

As GodsPeasant stares down the barrel of the 2025 fantasy football season, the outlook is grim. With a precarious division rank of ninth and languishing in the bottom third percentile overall, hopes are dwindling. Much of the team's fate hangs on the performance of Najee Harris, whose questionable standing as RB36 leaves a glaring vulnerability in the starting lineup. While the wide receiver core offers a glimmer of hope, boasting talents like Ladd McConkey and Tyreek Hill, even they are overshadowed by the missteps at the draft table. Though snagging Rico Dowdle and Josh Downs at relative bargains offered brief moments of satisfaction, the costly overreach for Patrick Mahomes looms heavily over the team's prospects. With spirits as dim as their statistical outlook, the team seems resigned to a season of dashed hopes and missed opportunities.

As the 2025 fantasy football season kicks off, estamania is ready to tackle both its division rivals and the broader competition with determination. Currently sitting at 8th in their division, the New Jersey Devils, and in the 31st percentile overall, the team faces an uphill battle but possesses the potential to climb higher. Jalen Hurts, who was drafted earlier than expected, will be pivotal in leading this squad, despite the reach. The team's wide receiver corps, featuring Travis Hunter and D.J. Moore, holds a respectable division rank, thanks to their solid contributions, even though Hunter was selected ahead of his average draft position. Zach Ertz, ranked 20th among tight ends, remains a crucial yet vulnerable piece of the puzzle; his performance could significantly impact the team's fortune. Meanwhile, Aaron Jones offers great value as a savvy draft choice, picked later than projected in many leagues, providing a potential edge on the field. As estamania embarks on this journey, strategic plays and standout performances will be essential in improving their standings across the board.

As the 2025 fantasy football season approaches, Team JoeyP17 finds itself in a position of cautious optimism. Coming off a successful campaign last year, where they finished in the upper half percentile, the team is hoping to build on that momentum. Currently ranked 7th in their division and in the 41st percentile overall, they have some clear strengths and areas for improvement. Their backfield looks formidable with talents like Jahmyr Gibbs and Derrick Henry leading the charge, providing a solid foundation to bank on each week. However, the tight end position remains a potential vulnerability that could present challenges as the season progresses. A key storyline to watch will be Jayden Higgins, whose performance might just dictate the trajectory of JoeyP17's season. While their wide receiver lineup includes reliable options like Terry McLaurin and DeVonta Smith, Higgins' development could be pivotal given his role on the team. The draft strategy also included some bold moves, capturing value with Isaac Guerendo slightly later than expected, but taking calculated risks with Matthew Stafford and Jalen Milroe ahead of their average draft positions. On the flip side, reaching early for players like Baker Mayfield and Kyle Monangai poses a gamble that could either pay off or necessitate adjustments. Ultimately, JoeyP17's ability to navigate these uncertainties and capitalize on their established strengths will determine how far they can climb in both their division and the competitive landscape. With a mix of promising talent and strategic gambits, the upcoming season holds potential for both exciting successes and challenging hurdles.

In the bustling carnival that is the 2025 fantasy football season, Precept24 embarks on its quest with a whimsical twist, as if their fortunes were being foretold by a soothsayer with a penchant for riddles and rubber chickens. The New Jersey Devils division witnesses Precept24 prancing at the midsection, ranked 6th, as if they were a tightrope walker balancing between triumph and calamity. Their wide receiver circus, led by Puka Nacua and Nico Collins, forms a dazzling aerial act, swinging from yardage to yardage with unparalleled grace, while Rashee Rice, Courtland Sutton, and the mysteriously elusive Christian Kirk form a kaleidoscope of pass-catching prowess. Meanwhile, on a stage fraught with irony, Justin Herbert and Anthony Richardson take center ring, their quarterbacking spectacle resembling a game of musical chairs where the music never quite stops at the right time. Rachaad White, the enigmatic running back juggler, spins plates of potential and peril, each wobble threatening to send the whole act crashing down—a reality Saquon Barkley watches with bemused detachment, having been kidnapped by Precept24 in an 11th-hour heist worthy of a caper film. A madcap journey through the percentile underworld places Precept24 in the 44th, where shadows whisper of untapped potential, and Juwan Johnson, plucked unexpectedly late like a long-forgotten treasure, stands ready to shine amidst the peculiar spectacle. As the tournament unfolds, Precept24 dashes and dodges through the ranks, hoping the dance of destiny favors their eclectic ensemble, all while the audience holds its breath for the grand, absurd crescendo.

Though their wide receivers and tight ends may not be as solid, the potential for breakout performances from players like Emeka Egbuka and Darren Waller offers hope. J.K. Dobbins holds a pivotal role, and his contributions could make a significant difference this season. Additionally, snagging Cedric Tillman later than expected could prove to be a savvy move. As the Teenjus gear up for the 2025 fantasy football season, they find themselves well-positioned to build on last year's achievements and perhaps elevate their game to new heights. With a strong showing in 2024, ending in the 63rd percentile, the team has its sights set on climbing even higher this year. Their formidable quarterback lineup, led by Lamar Jackson, is expected to be a powerhouse, supported effectively by Dak Prescott, who, despite being drafted earlier than his ADP, could prove to be a savvy move. The team's tight ends are a significant strength, providing a critical edge in this TE Premium format; George Kittle and Mark Andrews form an impressive duo, with Isaiah Likely's performance likely to be a key determinant of the team's overall success. On the wide receiver front, Amon-Ra St. Brown offers excellent value and consistency, while veterans like Mike

Evans and emerging talents like George Pickens add depth and potential breakthrough opportunities. Ranking fourth in their division, the Teenjus have a solid foundation and a mix of experience and potential that could see them rise through the ranks. With strategic improvements and a touch of good fortune, they might just outperform expectations and make this season one to remember.

The Little Giants are gearing up for an electrifying 2025 season with a potent mix of youthful exuberance and strategic talent across the board. This year, they're poised to dazzle with the division's most formidable wide receiver lineup, spearheaded by Ja'Marr Chase WR1 and supported by rising stars like Jaxon Smith-Njigba WR13 and Zay Flowers WR28. Despite some challenges at the tight end position, the Little Giants are in prime position to leverage their young, dynamic roster, boasting an average age of just 24.1. With De'Von Achane RB6 leading the charge in the backfield, the team has made savvy draft decisions, securing Achane at a sweet spot beyond his average draft position. As the third-ranked team in their division, they are eager to climb the ranks and capture the spotlight. Although Bo Nix and Xavier Worthy were taken earlier than expected, the team's strategic gambles could very well pay off in thrilling ways. With an exhilarating season on the horizon, the Little Giants are ready to make a splash and turn heads as they embark on this exciting journey!

As the 2025 fantasy football season kicks off, SalLetoFF is poised for an exciting campaign with aspirations to build on last year's success and achieve even greater heights. Coming off a strong 2024 finish and currently sitting impressively at second in their division with a stellar 92 percentile ranking overall, the team is ready to make waves. While the quarterback and wide receiver positions present some challenges, the squad's solid foundation is cemented by having the most formidable tight end lineup in the division. With Brock Bowers leading the charge as the top-ranked tight end, supported by Trey McBride, Travis Kelce, and Kyle Pitts, the team boasts unmatched depth in this crucial position. Having secured great value picks in the draft, Chuba Hubbard promises to provide steady production alongside Jonathan Taylor and D'Andre Swift in the backfield. As Keon Coleman steps up to prove his worth, the team's synergy and strategic drafting could make all the difference.

With these strengths, SalLetoFF looks forward to a thrilling season filled with potential triumphs and memorable performances.

As the 2025 fantasy football season kicks off, CrazyAmbassador stands poised to dominate with an impressive blend of youthful energy and strategic acumen. Riding high from a successful 2024 campaign, where they finished in the 66th percentile, CrazyAmbassador has upped their game, now ranking first in the New Jersey Devils division and landing in the prestigious 95th percentile overall. With a dynamic roster featuring top-tier talents like Bijan Robinson, the number one running back, and CeeDee Lamb, the third-ranked wide receiver, this team is built for success. Their backfield boasts incredible depth, with stars like Omarion Hampton and James Conner providing a formidable ground attack. Meanwhile, their receiver lineup sparkles with promise, headlined by CeeDee Lamb's explosive playmaking and bolstered by the rising talent of Drake London. The team's strategic draft choices have yielded excellent value, particularly snagging Bijan Robinson at a bargain and securing late-round gems like Ray Davis. While Jayden Reed may be one of the weaker projected starters, his potential remains invaluable in complementing this already-stacked roster. With an average starter age of just 24.8, CrazyAmbassador is not only strong but also agile and forward-looking, setting the stage for what promises to be a thrilling and successful season.
