Rankings are based on actual Scott Fish Bowl ADP from the FantasyLife Scott Fish Bowl tool. Note that in a major tournament like this with over 5,000 teams, there are miniscule degrees of separation at play. One player having a breakout season can drastically change a team's results.

These rankings are intended to be entertaining and add in a small way to a wonderful cause. Please consider donating to Fantasy Cares.

There is a particular exhaustion that comes with defending a reputation the numbers no longer fully support. Scal74 went 29-7 last season, scored in the 91st percentile, and now sits projected 14th percentile heading into 2026, slotted 12th in the RBI Baseball division. The roster is not without real pieces: Ashton Jeanty projects as RB7, DeVonta Smith comes into the year finally unshackled from AJ Brown's shadow and projects as WR14, and Chris Olave at WR11 gives the Shough-Olave stack some legitimate upside. But the draft did not help much. Two major reaches, including Pat Freiermuth three rounds ahead of his ADP, and the best value on the board was Tre Tucker falling nearly three rounds to WR65, which is not exactly the kind of windfall that changes a projection. The gap between who Scal74 was and who the numbers say they are now is wide and uncomfortable. Smith breaking out as a true alpha in Philadelphia could narrow it. So far, narrowing it is all they have.

Cadamo drafted a roster that only works if everyone is reading from the same script, and to their credit, the script is ambitious. The Dak Prescott and CeeDee Lamb stack is the centerpiece, a projected WR5 tethered to a QB7, and layering in Jake Ferguson at TE12 gives that Dallas offense three potential contributors firing in the same direction. Caleb Williams paired with Colston Loveland adds a second correlated pillar, and Williams at QB6 with Loveland at TE3 is genuinely elite company for that pairing to keep. The problem is that correlation cuts both ways. When those offenses cook, cadamo will be impossible to beat. When they stall, this roster has nowhere to hide, because the fallback options are players like Chris Godwin at WR38 and Cam Skattebo at RB20, solid pieces who cannot carry a week on their own. The 17th percentile tournament standing is not a fluke, it reflects a team that is betting everything on a parlayed vision of the future rather than hedging toward a floor.

TE: George Kittle (S) (TE9 | $12 | 5.04) ♦

Five major reaches, zero steals, and a division rank of 10th tell you everything you need to know before you even open the roster. @TPD3 ESPN drafted George Kittle two full rounds early, grabbed Tua Tagovailoa at TE9 and QB31 respectively as if both were running out of time, and then kept reaching in the late rounds on players like Jaylin Noel and Elijah Sarratt, who were available nearly four rounds later in leagues where people were paying attention. The cruelest part is that the foundation is genuinely there. Drake Maye is a projected QB2 coming off an MVP-caliber season, and with A.J. Brown now in New England the ceiling on that investment is real. Puka Nacua projects as WR1. Those are genuine building blocks. But the draft capital burned chasing Kittle, Tua, and a parade of dart throws at the back end left this roster thin where it needed depth and padded where it didn't. The field will be polite about it. The standings will not.

Last year huskerdkb was an 82nd-percentile machine, a 27-9 juggernaut that looked like it had the whole thing figured out. This year's version is sitting at the 40th percentile and ninth in the RBI Baseball division, and the gap between that reputation and this projection is where the story lives. The backfield is genuinely elite, with Bijan Robinson at RB2 and Saquon Barkley at RB8 anchoring a group that should carry real scoring weight. But the receiving corps thins out fast, with Ladd McConkey at WR20 as the lone bright spot and Xavier Worthy at WR49 as the next name on the depth chart. The Herbert-McConkey stack is tidy, but Justin Herbert comes in as a QB8, and his second projected starter Cam Ward sits at QB23, dependent on a Tennessee offense that upgraded its weapons but has yet to prove it can elevate Ward when it matters. Fourteen chalk picks and one major reach on Dontayvion Wicks suggest a manager who drafted to the board rather than reshaped it. The 2025 version of this team earned its flowers. The 2026 version will have to grow new ones.

Last year, OTC FFB went 30-6 and scored in the 99th percentile. This year, they are projected 43rd percentile and eighth in the RBI Baseball division, and the distance between those two numbers is the whole story. The receiver group is genuinely excellent, Drake London at WR7, Malik Nabers at WR12, and Brock Bowers at TE1 forming the kind of top-end talent that wins weeks, and Kyle Pitts at TE7 gives the roster real depth behind him. But the quarterback situation is where reputation meets reality and flinches. Baker Mayfield, the presumed starter, stumbled to a QB18 finish in 2025, his supporting cast thinned by injury and then free agency, and consensus projection is not optimistic he recovers his 2024 form. His backup is Malik Willis, the team's weakest projected starter at QB24. The draft did not help matters either, with Carson Beck taken nearly six rounds before his ADP, a reach that reads less like conviction and more like a manager chasing the ghost of a roster that no longer exists.

TE: Isaiah Likely (S) (TE13 | $7 | 6.03), Dallas Goedert (S) (TE15 | $6 | 9.10) adamaizer sits at 48th percentile and seventh in the RBI Baseball division, which tells you exactly what kind of team this is: good enough to beat the bad ones, not good enough to scare the good ones. The margins decide everything. The foundation is genuinely elite, Christian McCaffrey at RB3 and Jonathan Taylor at RB4 anchoring a projected starting group that includes Chase Brown, Josh Jacobs, and Travis Etienne, the last of whom arrived as a legitimate value after falling nearly two rounds past his ADP. But the draft revealed one decision that could haunt the margins all season: Isaiah Likely, projected TE13, was taken 2.7 rounds early, a price that only looks reasonable if Likely outperforms his projection by a meaningful margin. Tony Pollard, the weakest projected starter at RB30, is the kind of player who flips weeks from wins to losses in a format this competitive. Last year's 72 percent win rate offers a flattering baseline, but this roster lives and dies in the margins, and right now those margins are thin enough to cut either way.

TE: Dalton Kincaid (S) (TE11 | $10 | 7.08) ♦, Greg Dulcich (TE25 | $2 | 11.08), Jake Tonges (TE34 | $0 | 17.08)

goosekeller didn't win the draft on one flashy pick. They won it on volume and consistency, round after round coming out roughly even or ahead. The receiver group tells the story best: A.J. Brown (WR8), Rashee Rice (WR13), Tee Higgins (WR19), and Jaylen Waddle (WR23) form a projected-starter core that most managers in the RBI Baseball division simply cannot match, and Brown was secured with barely a whisper of a reach at 2.05 against an ADP of 2.10. Layer in Khalil Shakir, who fell a full 2.5 rounds past his ADP before goosekeller scooped him up, and the depth behind those starters carries real value. Josh Allen (QB1) anchors the whole operation, with a tight-end stack alongside Dalton Kincaid adding another layer of connectivity. David Montgomery comes to Houston with a point to prove after his role in Detroit narrowed considerably, and if he earns top billing over Woody Marks, he upgrades a backfield group that is currently just average on paper. Sitting 59th percentile with room to climb, this roster is built like a team that will be annoying to play in November.

TE: Dalton Schultz (TE22 | $3 | 11.06), Colby Parkinson (TE31 | $1 | 14.07)

jlfoster10 didn't build this roster with a flashy gamble or a single defining moment, just round after round of coming out ahead. The foundation is legitimate: Lamar Jackson at QB3 was already a strong pick, and getting him a half-round past his ADP made it cleaner. Jaxon Smith-Njigba at WR3 gives this lineup a genuine top-end weapon, and a six-deep group of projected starters in the backfield including Jeremiyah Love (RB13), Kyren Williams (RB15), and Javonte Williams (RB17) means jlfoster10 is not sweating one bad week from a single back. The real quiet score was RJ Harvey, a projected RB28 who slipped more than two rounds past his ADP and lands here as the weakest projected starter, which tells you something about the overall floor. The 2025 season backed up the approach with a 72-win percentage and 86th-percentile scoring, so the cautious optimism here is earned. Fifth in the RBI Baseball division is where this sits now, but the draft process suggests the ceiling is higher.

Vairzy walked out of this draft looking like someone who plays poker by feel and keeps winning anyway. The reaches are right there in the ledger: Michael Mayer pulled two rounds before his ADP, Cooper Kupp yanked nearly three rounds early, Juwan Johnson taken almost two rounds ahead of schedule. By the conventional math, vairzy overpaid repeatedly and should have a roster full of regret. Instead, the projected lineup includes Ja'Marr Chase at WR2, Tyler Warren at TE4, Kenneth Walker III at RB10, and Breece Hall at RB14, with Jalen Hurts sliding in as a genuine value after falling nearly a full round and a half past his expected price. That is a genuinely frightening collection of talent. The reaches at the back end of the draft funded the elite core at the top, and the top is very, very good. Coming off a 95th-percentile scoring season in 2025, vairzy has rebuilt with the same aggressive confidence, landing fourth in the RBI Baseball division and in the 68th percentile of the field. Whether that aggression is genius or fortunate stubbornness, the scoreboard has not asked for clarification yet.

The Ryan Express didn't win the draft with one thunderous pick. They won it with a quiet accumulation of correct decisions. Jahmyr Gibbs at RB1 anchors the whole operation, and pairing him with De'Von Achane at RB6 and Omarion Hampton at RB9 means the backfield is simply elite. But the real signal of a well-run draft is how it holds up in the middle and late rounds, and here the Express rarely slipped. Zay Flowers at WR16 and Jameson Williams at WR21 give the receiving corps genuine upside, and Williams comes with the added bonus of a Jared Goff stack that should pay dividends when Detroit gets into shootouts. David Njoku, nabbed 2.3 rounds past his ADP, is the kind of quiet win that separates organized drafters from lucky ones. The QB situation is thin, with Goff projected at QB16, but in a positionless format the freight on this roster runs through the skill positions, and that freight is moving fast. Third in the division and 72nd percentile overall, the Express looks like a team that simply drafted better than most.

TE: Trey McBride (S) (TE2 | $53 | 1.09), Tucker Kraft (S) (TE5 | $23 | 4.04) ♦

There was no single moment where mzkp54 won this draft, which is exactly the point. Justin Jefferson falling to pick 2.04 when his ADP sat at 1.12 is the kind of quiet windfall that sets a tone, and mzkp54 built on it methodically from there. Trevor Lawrence, projected QB10 and a clear starter, slid a full round and a half past where he should have been taken. Trey McBride at TE2 anchors the tight end group, and the Jordan Love and Tucker Kraft stack gives the roster a leveraged upside play that could separate mzkp54 from teams with similar raw talent. The reach on Darnell Mooney is real, three-plus rounds early for a WR82, but one reach on a deep roster is noise, not a pattern. The 2025 numbers back the approach: 81 percent wins and a 90th percentile scoring season suggest this manager has been doing this correctly for a while. Sitting second in the RBI Baseball division and at the 72nd percentile of the field, mzkp54 arrives in 2026 looking every bit like a contender.

TE: Eli Stowers (TE32 | $1 | 16.06), Mike Gesicki (TE33 | $0 | 17.07), Justin Joly (TE- | $0 | 20.06)

tewks73 didn't win the 2026 Scott Fish Bowl draft in a single moment. They won it in fifteen of them. Sitting atop the RBI Baseball division and projecting at the 85th percentile across the field, this is a roster built on relentless precision: three players taken after their ADP, zero reaches, and a starting lineup anchored by names like Amon-Ra St. Brown (WR4), George Pickens (WR10), Tetairoa McMillan (WR15), and James Cook (RB5). That is not a fluke, that is a philosophy. Jaxson Dart (QB11) fell a full round past his ADP and lands as a projected starter. C.J. Stroud (QB22) slid nearly two rounds and gives tewks73 real optionality at the position. The one place where patience meets genuine risk is Alec Pierce (WR32), a big-play weapon who is currently on the PUP list following ankle surgery and could miss the first four games if he does not clear in time. Even so, tewks73 built enough cushion in the draft that a slow start from Pierce is an inconvenience, not a crisis.
