Scott Fish Bowl Rankings, Analysis, and Team Breakdowns

Rankings are based on actual Scott Fish Bowl ADP from the FantasyLife Scott Fish Bowl tool. Note that in a major tournament like this with nearly 5,000 teams, there are miniscule degrees of separation at play. One player having a breakout season can drastically change a team's results.

These rankings are intended to be entertaining and add in a small way to a wonderful cause. Please consider donating to Fantasy Cares.

As the 2025 fantasy football season looms on the horizon, Absolute Truth finds itself in a rather bleak position. With an unenviable ranking at the very bottom of their division and languishing in the lowest percentile of the tournament, the outlook is hardly promising. The quarterback situation stirs little confidence, with Justin Herbert and Michael Penix Jr. failing to inspire as the linchpins of the team's offensive potential. Despite leaning on the standout performance of Brock Bowers in this TE Premium format, the team's running game looks alarmingly fragile, with Jaydon Blue as a projected starter. The receiver corps, featuring solid talents like Ladd McConkey and Tyreek Hill, offers a glimmer of hope, but it feels like a mere consolation amidst the broader turmoil. While some draft decisions brought value, others, notably the early pick of McConkey, might just be the Achilles' heel that drags this team deeper into the depths of despair. With an average age suggesting potential but lacking the seasoned experience to back it up, Absolute Truth seems poised for another year of trials rather than triumphs.

As the 2025 season looms, Air Raid Waleed is grappling with an all-too-familiar sense of impending doom. Despite a valiant effort to claw back from last year's dismal performance, where they languished at the bottom of the scoring charts and won merely a handful of their matchups, the outlook remains grim. Ranked 11th in their division and languishing in the lower percentile overall, hopes for a triumphant season appear fleeting. While they boast one of the most formidable wide receiver corps led by Justin Jefferson and CeeDee Lamb, the team's glaring weaknesses elsewhere cannot be ignored. The running back situation is particularly dire, with Najee Harris as the leading man in a position that barely inspires confidence. Overzealous draft choices have left the roster depleted of depth and value, with player selections like Mike Evans and Diontae Johnson made prematurely, compounding their challenges. Even strategic plays, like the quarterback-receiver stacks, seem insufficient to buoy this beleaguered squad. As the curtain rises on the new season, the shadow of last year's failures casts a long and unnerving pall over the team, leaving fans braced for another uphill battle.

As the 2025 fantasy football season approaches, DHHMatt finds itself navigating a challenging landscape. Ranked 10th in their division and in the 30th percentile overall, this young squad faces an uphill battle. Their strength undoubtedly lies in their running backs, with Ashton Jeanty leading the charge as one of the top performers paired with veteran standouts Josh Jacobs and Joe Mixon. However, starting Cam Skattebo, despite being the weakest link at RB, highlights the team's thin depth. The wide receiver lineup offers some promise, ranking 7th in the division, bolstered by the dynamic talents of Travis Hunter and Tetairoa McMillan. Both receivers, joined by Xavier Worthy and Chris Godwin, have the potential to deliver pivotal performances that could shift DHHMatt's standings. One of the youngest teams in the tournament, DHHMatt has made strategic moves in the draft, securing significant value with players like Colston Loveland who fell well below their expected draft position. However, they've also taken risks, some of which might not pay off, such as reaching significantly for Anthony Richardson, which could impact their overall performance if he doesn't meet expectations. As the season unfolds, the team's ability to leverage their youthful energy and capitalize on undervalued assets will be key. With a mix of promising prospects and seasoned veterans, DHHMatt aims to climb the rankings, though much depends on how well they can navigate the uncertainties and maximize the potential of their eclectic roster.

As the clock strikes an odd hour in the fantastical landscape of 2025, gothamranger embarks on its ever-peculiar adventure through the labyrinthine fields of fantasy football. Perched precariously on a division rank of nine, like a cat contemplating the leap from the ninth story of a gothic skyscraper, the team's journey is as unpredictable as the dance of shadows. With Cam Ward swirling at QB23, the enigmatic Jayden Daniels at QB3, and Justin Fields conjuring QB8 magic, the quarterback carousel spins with glee. Their tight ends are nothing short of a Shakespearean troupe, with Evan Engram sashaying at TE7, Travis Kelce reciting soliloquies at TE5, while Zach Ertz, TE20, performs an avant-garde routine, crucial yet teetering at the brink, akin to an acrobat without a net. In this whimsical realm, Amon-Ra St. Brown, taken at 2.02, leaps forth as a WR6 beacon, while Calvin Ridley, WR36, and Ricky Pearsall, WR42, join in a surreal pas de trois, with Darnell Mooney, WR51, bringing up the rear with his own unique flair. The team boldly reached for Quinshon Judkins at 4.11, a daring maneuver that echoes through the cosmos like the soft twang of a lute played by a mischievous pixie. Meanwhile, gothamranger sits comfortably in the 41st percentile of a vast, swirling sea, navigating the absurdity with a peculiar grace, like a lighthouse guiding wayward ships to shores unknown.

In the whimsical realm of fantasy football's 2025 season, where logic takes a holiday and tight ends reign supreme, Barring Injury finds itself navigating the peculiar tides of competition. With their trusty trio of tight ends—Trey McBride, Sam LaPorta, and the enigmatic Mike Gesicki—the team towers above their division like a giraffe in a room full of hedgehogs. While the rest of the league feasts on the mythical beasts of WR prowess, Barring Injury takes the scenic route with Zach Charbonnet, the unsung hero who dances delicately between brilliance and bewilderment. As the winds of fate blow them to the middle of the standings, they discover that Marvin Mims, acquired at a bargain, whispers the secrets of value like a sage, while the mysterious Jalen Royals arrives fashionably early to the starting gate. Drake London, Garrett Wilson, DeVonta Smith, and a vintage Cooper Kupp form a receiving quartet, forging a formidable yet unpredictable symphony. Meanwhile,

Jerome Ford marches ahead, defying the timeline norms with his headstrong ambition. Nestled snugly within the eccentric division of Wood Brothers Racing, Barring Injury flirts with mediocrity as the high-stakes tournament envelops them in its chaotic embrace, leaving them in the curious company of the 48th percentile.

As the 2025 fantasy football season approaches, Pearson Racing finds itself navigating a challenging landscape in the Wood Brothers Racing division. Currently ranked 8th, the team is relying on its formidable backfield to gain momentum. With Saquon Barkley leading the charge at RB2 and supported by the likes of James Cook and Chuba Hubbard, the running game is anticipated to be a key strength. Nevertheless, the wide receiver lineup appears shaky, with Brian Thomas Jr. as the standout at WR8, but little depth beyond Michael Pittman. Perhaps one of the most uncertain elements for Pearson Racing this season is quarterback Bryce Young. Taken slightly after his ADP, he offers some draft value, but his QB22 ranking suggests potential volatility at the position. His performance could very well be the linchpin that decides the team's fate in both their division and the broader competition. Meanwhile, Tony Pollard provides a cushion as a depth pick who came at an advantageous selection point. However, the decision to draft Elijah Moore much earlier than his ADP could prove costly if he doesn't outperform expectations. Heading into the season, Pearson Racing stands in the 48th percentile overall, indicating room for improvement but also potential for a surprise surge. The team will need strategic decisions and perhaps a bit of luck to climb the ranks and make a significant impact this year.

As the 2025 fantasy football season looms, Glen Wood finds themselves in a curious position. After a lackluster 2024, where they landed in the 36th percentile overall and secured victories in only 42% of their matchups, there's both anticipation and apprehension about the road ahead. The team heads into the new season ranked sixth in their division, Wood Brothers Racing, and holding a middling spot in the 49th percentile overall. Their strength clearly lies in a formidable stable of running backs, led by top-tier talent Bijan Robinson and bolstered by the likes of Bucky Irving and Alvin Kamara. These players will be pivotal, as the team aims to improve its standings. However, the quarterback situation remains a point of concern with Jordan Love and J.J. McCarthy, who rank outside the top 15 in their positions. This could be a significant hurdle in their quest for success. The wide receiver and tight end positions provide little comfort, with Rashee Rice and Khalil Shakir leading a group that lacks depth and standout potential. J.K. Dobbins, while an essential piece, is viewed as a potential weak link and his performance could heavily influence the team's fortunes. Glen Wood enters this season with some smart draft moves, securing Aaron Jones at a bargain, yet they're also burdened by reaching early for players like J.J. McCarthy and Jordan Love. This mixed bag of strategy and roster composition leaves them on uncertain ground. As the season progresses, all eyes will be on whether their running back core can carry them past last year's struggles or if their other positional weaknesses will hold them back again.

As the 2025 fantasy football season kicks off, joshisrad is positioned to make a significant impact both in their division and on the larger tournament stage. With a solid foundation laid during their average 2024 campaign, the team has strategically bolstered its roster, particularly at quarterback, where they boast the formidable trio of Lamar Jackson, Bo Nix, and Matthew Stafford. Jackson, drafted with exceptional value, could be the linchpin for rising through the ranks. The wide receiver corps, featuring Puka Nacua, D.J. Moore, and Courtland Sutton, promises exciting potential, especially with the stack bonuses from pairing Sutton with Nix and Jackson with Mark Andrews. However, the performance of Jayden Higgins remains a wildcard—his progress could be pivotal for joshisrad's success. Despite some reaching in the draft, the depth and synergy of this lineup, along with a couple of strategic stacks, poise joshisrad for a promising season, aiming to improve their standing and make a deep run this year.

As the 2025 fantasy football season dawns, Team drewloutz stands poised on the brink of greatness, ready to ascend to new heights and leave an indelible mark across the competitive landscape. A stalwart force in the Wood Brothers Racing division, drewloutz sits comfortably at rank 4, projecting a blend of strategic finesse and tenacious spirit. Last year's journey was one of steady ascent, culminating in a respectable overall standing that now fuels the fire for greater glory. With quarterback Jalen Hurts orchestrating the offense with unparalleled precision, and the dynamic wide receiver quartet—Jaxon Smith-Njigba, Davante Adams, Jaylen Waddle, and Deebo Samuel—promising an aerial assault like no other, drewloutz is primed for explosive performances. Though Dallas Goedert may represent a calculated gamble at tight end, his potential to elevate his game is the team's secret weapon. The savvy draft selections, including securing Isiah Pacheco and Goedert amid whispers of undervaluation, showcase a strategy as shrewd as it is ambitious. Even the bold acquisitions of Alec Pierce and Dyami Brown reflect a daring vision eager to defy expectations. As drewloutz charges into battle, the echoes of their aspirations will reverberate through the ranks, cementing their legacy in this grand tapestry of fantasy football lore.

In the thrilling tapestry of the 2025 fantasy football season, team woody55255 stands poised on the precipice of greatness, eager to transcend the shadows of last year's trials. With a strategic overhaul and a renewed vigor, they embark on their campaign with aspirations reaching beyond the tangible horizon. Positioned as a formidable force in the Wood Brothers Racing division, woody55255 holds a prestigious rank of third, an enviable perch from which they survey the competitive landscape. Their prowess is further underscored by their impressive placement in the upper echelons of the league, proudly nestled in the 74th percentile. Anchoring this ambitious ensemble are the iridescent talents of quarterbacks Josh Allen and Patrick Mahomes, whose dual brilliance promises to illuminate the pathway to victory. The wide receiver corps, led by the electrifying Malik Nabers and bolstered by Marvin Harrison Jr., radiates a dazzling array of potential, each catch and yard a testament to the artistry of the gridiron. While the running backs present a challenge, the team's strategic acumen and tactical foresight have them poised to mitigate these shortcomings with the shrewd management of assets like Breece Hall. Jonnu Smith, steadfast at tight end, provides a crucial stability, a cornerstone upon which the team's fortunes may well hinge. Despite past adversities, woody55255 emerges this season as a paragon of resilience and audacity, ready to carve their name into the annals of fantasy legend.

As AndrewSF embarks on the 2025 fantasy football season, the team stands poised for another thrilling campaign. After a stellar 2024 performance, finishing in the 92nd percentile and achieving an impressive 86% winning rate, this year's squad is ready to build on that momentum. Ranked 2nd in their division and within the 85th percentile overall, AndrewSF boasts a lineup designed for success. The running back corps is a formidable force with stars like De'Von Achane, Christian McCaffrey, and Chase Brown leading the charge, providing consistent scoring opportunities week after week. At tight end, George Kittle continues to be a powerhouse, supported by the dynamic Kyle Pitts, offering an edge in this TE Premium setup. While the wide receiver group faces challenges, Emeka Egbuka holds promise as a key player looking to elevate his game. Smart drafting tactics have allowed AndrewSF to secure valuable picks like TreVeyon Henderson and Jayden Reed later than their ADP, ensuring depth and versatility across the roster. With strategic foresight and a keen eye for value, AndrewSF is well-equipped to tackle the competitive landscape and achieve excellence once again.

As the 2025 fantasy football season approaches, Team SamChoudhury is poised to make a remarkable turnaround from their underwhelming performance last year. With an impressive ranking of first in their division and sitting in the 89th percentile overall, this team has clearly redefined itself as a formidable contender. The dynamic duo of Joe Burrow and Ja'Marr Chase leads the charge, with Burrow's top-tier quarterback skills complemented by Chase's elite wide receiver prowess. Adding to the offensive arsenal are A.J. Brown and Tee Higgins, who promise to bolster the team's aerial attack. Although the running back lineup presents some challenges, with players like Jaylen Warren and Javonte Williams needing to step up, the strategic acquisition of Williams late in the draft could prove pivotal. While the tight end position remains an area for potential improvement, the synergy between Burrow and his receivers creates an electrifying stack bonus that is likely to keep SamChoudhury at the forefront of competition. With a keen eye for value and a lineup ready to capitalize on its strengths, this team is set to capture the spotlight and make waves in the upcoming season.
